C. I. O. Wins Steel's First Offer as Sole Labor Agent

Election Will Determine Right to Represent J. & L. Plants.

27,000, Cheering, Go Back to Jobs

Similar Agreement Ends Strike of 5,000 in Pittsburgh Co.

On the Labor Front.

Thousands of cheering workers paraded back to the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation mills, ending their strike under a tentative peace agreement marking a major victory in the union drive for sole collective bargaining rights.

The striking Federated Motion Picture Crafts rejected a peace proposal from Hollywood film producers and declared that every actor who passes through studio picket lines will be classed as a "st breaker."

Big Strike Ends.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, May 14.—Thousands of cheering workers paraded back to the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation mills today, ending the greatest walkout in the last 18 years of steel history under a tentative peace agreement marking a major victory for the union organizers of John L. Lewis.

For the agreement reached between Chairman Phillip Murray, of the steel workers organizing committee, and H. E. Lewis, chairman of the corporation's board, contained the first public offer of a ranking steel company to recognize the union as sole collective bargaining agency for all its employes.

The agreement provided for immediate resumption of operations at the strike-affected plants in Pittsburgh and Aliquippa, Pa., returned 27,000 workers to their jobs without discrimination and cleared the way for an election to determine the union's claim to exclusive collective bargaining rights.

A few hours later Regional Director Clinton S. Golden, of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, announced an agreement with officials of the Pittsburgh Steel Co., ending a strike of more than 5,000 workers in its Allenport and Monessen plants.

Golden said an employe election will be held under the auspices of the National Labor Board to determine the collective bargaining agent.

The terms, he added, were similar to those reached in the agreement terminating the Jones & Laughlin walkout.

Over in 36 Hours.

Murray called the Jones & Laughlin settlement a "complete victory" and announced a new union policy under which it will demand sole collective bargaining rights at all other independent steel companies with which it negotiates in the future.

Former contracts have recognized the union as representing only its members. They have been signed with United States Steel corporation subsidiaries and more than 100 smaller independents.

He ordered key men of the steel committee into executive session tomorrow in a move to enforce the sole-bargaining demand against Republic Steel Corporation and Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., two of the largest producers independent of the United States Steel Corporation.

Cheers, honking of automobile horns and wild shouts greeted first reports of the strike settlement at the Aliquippa and Pittsburgh works of Jones & Laughlin.

Frank Burke, vice president of the Aliquippa local of the union, stood on the hood of his car and shouted:

"We've got a contract with J. & L. I want the men on the 3 o'clock shifts to get back to work then."

Denver Widow's $200,000 Found, Nephew Arrested

By the Associated Press.

J. Edgar Hoover said yesterday Federal agents had recovered $208,600 in cash stolen from Mrs. Martin Blous, wealthy Denver widow, last month.

A nephew of Mrs. Blous, Joseph T. Watson, 26-year-old former medical student, Hoover said, is under arrest.

Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, asserted Watson left Denver about the same time Mrs. Blous missed $133,000 in currency and $36,000 in bonds. He was arrested aboard an ocean liner as it approached Los Angeles, May 6.

The official announcement said the youth was arrested just after he had been awarded thirteenth prize for his costume at a masquerade ball then in progress. Watson was dressing as a hula dancer. His arrest followed a Nation-wide hunt.

Loyalists Arm 100,000 Men to Quell Uprising

New Anarchist Revolution Launched; Iberians Dig in for Battle.

The Spanish War.

Revolts were reported within the ranks of both the Spanish loyalists and the rebels. The Spanish government mobilized 100,000 men to quell a new anarchist uprising in Catalonia. Two sections of the insurgent forces besieged in the University City section of Madrid were reported firing at each other after a quarrel over whether to surrender.

The loyalist government was declared ready to oust anarchist sympathizers from the cabinet.

Pope Pius was said to have offered to attempt to bring about a truce in the bloody fighting for possession of Bilbao.

New Anarchist Revolt.

By the United Press.

Perpignan, Franco-Spanish Frontier, May 14.—The Spanish government tonight mobilized 100,000 men to quell a new Anarchist revolt in Catalonia.

Eight hundred Anarchists were reported entrenched in the frontier town of Puigcerda. They prepared to meet forces sent by the loyalist Valencia government to quell the "revolution within a revolution" which has taken hundreds of lives, including those of many civilians.

The Anarchists, members of the FAI (Federation of Iberian Anarchists) dug in for battle with the Valencia troops, which were largely instrumental in putting down recent attempts by Anarchists to take over the Catalonian government.

They dug trenches, which were visible from the frontier, and barricaded highways leading into the town with iron grills taken from public parks and villas.

All lights in the town were extinguished tonight, while powerful searchlights pierced the blackness, searching for the loyalist troops who were expected momentarily.

Reports from Barcelona said there were brief outbreaks in various parts of the city.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 14.—The first fliers ever to complete a round trip airplane crossing of the North Atlantic without mishap, Dick Merrill and Jack Lambie, set their twin-motored monoplane down at Floyd Bennett Field late today after 24 hours of flying through rain and fog.

Several thousand rain-drenched spectators, excited by reports that the veteran transport pilots were unable to find an opening in the low-hanging clouds, saw the big plane appear suddenly out of the mist at 3:32 p. m., Eastern Standard time.

Without circling the field, the silver ship tobogganed down toward a long concrete runway and came to a smooth landing 3 minutes later, completing a flight from Southport, England, in the total elapsed time of 24 hours 22 minutes.

A thunderous cheer rose from the bedraggled crowd as the two fliers climbed down out of the cabin. They were long overdue, having been forced to make a 22-minute stopover at the Squantum Naval Air Base in Massachusetts to recheck their bearings and fuel supply.

"The weather was bad," said Merrill. "We didn't see anything all the way back but fog and rain."

He appeared tired from the strain of his second round trip crossing of the Atlantic within a year—the first ending in a crack-up in Newfoundland—but declared he was ready to return to his regular job on the New

Senators Told Jones Backed Van Sweringen

RFC Head Insisted Vast Interest Control C. & E. I., Hearing Reveals.

By the Associated Press.

A Senate committee heard testimony yesterday that Chairman Jesse H. Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, had insisted that the vast Van Sweringen transportation interests be left in control of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railway, being reorganized under the Federal bankrupty act.

Carrol Shanks, head of a bondholders' protective committee, told railway finance investigators that "I realized I would have a hell of a time coming to an agreement with Jones" on a reorganization if the bondholders opposed Van Sweringen domination.

The RFC is a major creditor of the road.

"Then the thing that really convinced you to accept this plan was the fact that you were told down at the RFC that you better come to terms with the Van Sweringens, and let them control it?" inquired Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana. "You were practically told by Jones to leave the Van Sweringens in there?"

"I so interpreted it," Shanks replied.

Wheeler had charged earlier the Van Sweringens gained control of the Illinois line secretly and illegally in defiance of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and that the road had then obtained an RFC loan through "subterfuge, or fraud."

He counseled Shanks:

"If you are going to let the Van Sweringen interests keep control,

Detective Force Reorganization Is Announced

3 Vital Squads Reduced; Rotation of Assignments Ended; Many Transfers.

In a move designed to strengthen his law forces against the rising tide of crime in the precincts, Detective Chief Bernard W. Thompson yesterday announced the complete reorganization of the Detective Bureau.

Increasing the number of detective sergeants in the Second and Third Precincts by one and two men, respectively, the shakeup resulted in the decrease of one man each from such vital squads as homicide, robbery and pickup.

With the announcement of the changes, Thompson also disclosed the inauguration of a new system of working men assigned to precincts in squads, each responsible for each felony committed in his territory.

"Better Results" Seen.

Heretofore, Thompson pointed out, assignments were rotated, with each man receiving different cases to work on.

The changes which will take effect this morning were described by the detective chief as a "means of getting better results." "By doubling up the assignments and districts," Thompson stated, "all men will be familiar with all the felonies in their precincts."

The announced changes followed closely the recent first annual report of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, which called public attention to crime conditions "of which the Nation's Capital cannot feel proud."

In certain instances, investigators for the crime association cited apparent inefficiency within the Police Department.

Beck Transferred.

Most notable of the transfers was the removal from the robbery squad of Detective Sergt. Robert J. Barrett, who was assigned to the Twelfth Precinct to work with Detective Sergt. Van Doren Hughes, who will move to the Ninth Precinct. The men both will receive assignments for each felony committed in the Ninth and Twelfth districts.

Detective Sergt. Walter J. Beck, ace investigator of the homicide squad, will go to the Second Precinct, as well as Detective Sergts. Robert Bryant, Earl L. Baker and Thomas Sweeney. They will fill vacancies left by the transfer of Sergts. Michael Mahaney and Curtis Trammell.

The present setup in the Third Precinct will be increased by the addition of Sergts. William V. Christian and Mahaney. Christian formerly was on the robbery squad. Sergts. Joseph Shimon and Harry Britton will remain at the Third Precinct.

Precincts Four and Five will remain the same except that the as-

Bloodstains Indicate Murder Of D. C. Man on River Boat

Murder or suicide was suspected by District and Virginia police last night in the mysterious disappearance from his stateroom of Charles F. Keene, 65, Washington real estate man, a passenger on the steamer District of Columbia for Norfolk from the Capital.

Pointing to murder, Norfolk police said, was a blood-stained bedroom found in disarray by a maid yesterday morning. Keene's spectacles were found smashed on the stateroom floor, the washstand and bed were bloodstained, and a trail of blood led through the stateroom window and over the side of the vessel.

"It would hardly seem likely," said Detective Sergt. J. C. Benton in Norfolk last night, "that a man would shoot himself and then crawl through the window to drop into the water."

There was nothing in the room that gave evidence of suicide, Benton said, adding, "We usually investigate such cases on the assumption of suicide, but the evidence that the man was shot complicates the case a good deal."

Benton said it would have been possible for an athletic man to reach the stateroom window from the outside by walking along the slender guard-rail which runs around the gunwales of the vessel from the after-deck.

Pointing to suicide, authorities here determined, was the fact that Keene, who once was a prosperous real estate dealer, had been suffering financial difficulties recently. They could establish no motive for a murder.

Washington police were awaiting the docking of the river boat here this morning at 7 o'clock in order to start their investigation. Meanwhile Keene's son, Charles Keene, jr., was summoned by his mother by long-distance telephone from her suite at the Fairfax Hotel, and he was to arrive here from New York. The son is an Annapolis graduate who

D. C. Dealers Will Deny Gas To Inebriates

7 Distributors Agree to Aid Traffic Safety Campaign.

Organization of Council Begun; Idea Widely Approved.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Seven local gasoline distributors, embracing the majority of Washington's service stations, yesterday joined the city-wide traffic safety movement by refusing to sell gas or offer service to drivers who are visibly intoxicated.

And at the same time yesterday first steps were taken toward the formation of a permanent traffic safety council when membership of an organizing committee was announced, with Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Post, as temporary chairman.

Proposals to establish the safety council received enthusiastic public support Thursday night at a dinner in the Willard Hotel honoring Lieut. Franklin M. Kreml, Evanston traffic authority. Civic, Government and city officials voted unanimously to arouse sentiment against traffic evils through concerted action and organization.

Committee Personnel.

Edward F. Colladay, president of the Washington Board of Trade, was named temporary vice chairman of the nuclear group, with other members including:

Col. Dan I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner; Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Superintendent of Police; Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways; William A. VanDuzer, Director of Traffic; Gratz Dunkum, Board of Education; Col. L. C. Crawford, chairman, traffic committee, Washington Board of Trade; Robert Swope, president, Washington Rotary Club; Burton Marsh, safety director, A. A. A.; George Keneippe, manager, Keystone Auto Club; Thomas E. Lodge, president, Federation of Citizens Associations; Mrs. Walter B. Fry, president, D. C. Parent-Teacher Association.

The proposed organization will be known as the Washington Traffic Safety Council and will include representatives of local business, civic and official activities. Formation plans were started following a motion by Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, during the Kreml dinner.

"Greatly Encouraged."

Pledged co-operation from local gasoline distributors came yesterday after Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer circularized a letter appealing for aid in his battle against drunken drivers and the ever-increasing Washington death toll.

In the majority of instances, it was learned, service stations agreed to erect signs reading:

"Attendants of this station are instructed not to sell gasoline or offer service to drivers who have been drinking."

Pointing out that this method of dealing with intoxicated motorists is now practiced in numerous other cities, Van Duzer said it will prove an able weapon against "the driver

Texas Legislator, Held for Murder, Attends Assembly

Austin, Tex., May 14 (AP).—State Representative B. E. Quinn surrendered to police on a murder charge in the fatal shooting of Herman Hicks, civil engineer, today—then calmly attended the session of the Texas Legislature, free on $1,000 bond.

Quinn and John R. Sterrett, Austin oil company employe, told conflicting stories of the shooting in a downtown hotel last night.

Quinn, 57, said his pistol was discharged accidentally in a scuffle at the door of his room after Hicks, 41, and Sterrett had threatened to kill him because he complained about a disturbance in their room.

Sterrett told newspapermen he had threatened to "give him a licking," but denied any threats against Quinn's life. He said Hicks, whom he described as a soldier of fortune, war veteran, contractor and importer of hardwood, "merely went along to witness the sport."

Roosevelt Adamant Against Court Truce, Slash in Relief Fund

By Sidney Olson.

The latest "Struggle of the Titans," a brand-new, unscheduled battle between the houses of Congress over the informal inquiry into the social security act, passed yesterday rapidly through its fourth, fifth and sixth phases, with a lot more phases to go.

The high spot of the struggle yesterday was a coffee-and-pistols-for-two statement by Representative Robert L. Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, aimed at the activities of Senator Arthur L. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan.

Phase One of the controversy was the launching by Senators Pat Harrison, of Mississippi; Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, both Democrats, and Vandenberg of the proposed study of the act by themselves, the Social Security Board and a 24-man advisory council.

VANDENBERG.

DOUGHTON.

Phase Two was the chagrin of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee, tax-originating body, that the House was not represented in the investigation. This chagrin was expressed in a verbal dressing-down administered secretly Thursday to Arthur J. Altmeyer and Vincent Miles, Social Security Board members, by the 18 Democrats of the committee, with a threat to hamstring the inquiry.

Phase Three was a slashing attack on these 18 Democrats, delivered Thursday night by Senator Vandenberg, who first proposed

5 Farm Groups To Give House 'AAA of 1937'

Administration Leaves Field Clear; Not to Offer Own Bill.

By Russell Smith.

Five national farm organizations will offer the House Agriculture Committee Monday the "agricultural adjustment act of 1937," reviving and modernizing the outlawed AAA, Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, announced last night.

The bill will be the Administration's ever-normal granary bill amplified so as, in O'Neal's phrase, to "put a bottom under as well as a ceiling over" prices of farm products.

H. R. Tolley, AAA administrator, verified O'Neal's statement that the Administration will not offer a program of its own. The farm group-sponsored bill will incorporate the ever-normal granary principle and such legislation, other than pending bills, as the AAA feels is essential, Tolley said.

Continuing production control rather than the last-resort penalty taxes proposed to another House committee earlier in the session will be a central feature of the new bill, it was made clear in O'Neal's statement last night.

Main adjuncts to this control are a new system of benefit payments and Wallace's granary principle of commodity loans for storage of products, but the bill as it now stands introduces a sliding scale of payments in each instance.

So far as benefit payments are concerned, they would amount to the difference, at the end of the crop year, between what the farmer actually received for his product and "parity prices." Parity prices are the average prices of farm products in the 1909-14 period, the period regarded as most nearly ideal in national economic balance.

House Stages 'Stand-up' and Gains Recess

Interior Bill Trimmed, in Stormy Session, but Not Passed.

By Robert C. Albright.

Tempers frayed by seven hours of continuous debate, the House yesterday staged a successful stand-up strike against a threatened night session and voted itself an adjournment, with two days of week-end freedom.

Riotous protests at efforts of temporary leaders to pass the $115,871,264 Interior bill before quitting brought the real leaders, Speaker Bankhead and Representative Sam Rayburn, racing back to the Hill from a White House conference.

They arrived just in time. Members already had voted to lay aside the Interior bill. Shouted motions to adjourn were adding to the bedlam. Bankhead rapped the gavel, Rayburn took the floor. The scene ended in perfect harmony, with members permitted to have their way. They went home.

Shortly before House Whip Pat Boland sent through an emergency call to the White House, then returned to plead with the members to wait for their leaders.

"I am just after talking with the Speaker at the White House," he cried above the din. "I'd like to see the House not adjourn until he gets here."

But the adjournment motions continued until Representative John J. O'Connor, of New York, temporarily in the chair, hit on a ruse. Representative Maury Maverick, of Texas, can speak any time, anywhere, at any length, extempo. So the chair recognized Mr. Maverick. And Mr. Maverick held the fort until leaders arrived.

Second only in confusion of the adjournment wrangle was an economy fracas that preceded it, as retrenchment-bent members aimed repeated shafts at irrigation and reclamation projects in the bill.

In the end $1,250,000 for the $80,000,000 Gila dam project in Arizona was stricken from the bill on a point of order, after a frenzied search for

'Revolts' Discussed With Party Heads

President Confers With Garner, Robinson, House Leaders.

By William V. Nessly.

President Roosevelt, carrying out his declaration that "I have just begun to fight" for New Deal objectives, last night rejected all suggestions of compromise on his court reorganization bill and insisted on a $1,500,000,000 relief fund for the next fiscal year.

Meeting Congressional leaders a few hours after he returned to the Capital from his two-week fishing trip to Texas, the President received reports on the tangled legislative situation and the incipient "revolts" on Capitol Hill, then undertook to clarify the legislative agenda.

He is understood to have told leaders he is convinced he has authority to make the cuts in expenditures proposed in the Congressional economy program, and to have expressed assurance he can balance the budget in 1938.

Favors Flood, Power Surveys.

His lieutenants were given to understand that within a few days he will send up a message on establishment of additional flood control and power authorities, similar to the Tennessee Valley Authority. Surveys, rather than projects involving large outlays of money, are understood to be the basis of this proposed legislation.

Later on, his views on a general labor policy, involving legislation on hours and wages, will be given to Congress.

In addition, Mr. Roosevelt is reported to have made clear his desire that farm tenancy legislation be enacted at this session. From a financial standpoint, however, the farm tenancy program would be a greatly restricted one.

Those called in for the conferences included Vice President Garner, Senate Majority Leader Robinson, Speaker Bankhead and House Floor Leader Rayburn. The President also conferred with the Cabinet.

Garner Silent on Talk.

Garner had 15 minutes alone with the President before the Cabinet meeting. He declined to discuss the talk to reporters, commenting only "the President is looking fine, isn't he?"

Some of Senator Robinson's friends at the Capitol had expressed belief the majority leader intended to advise the President that the court plan, calling for a maximum of six additional Supreme Court justices, appeared certain of defeat, and to suggest that the Judiciary Committee report out a compromise plan for two additional justices. Such a compromise was sure of winning, Robinson was said to feel, while its proposal by the committee itself would avoid the bitter fight that was certain on the floor if the six-justice plan were reported out.

When the floor leader emerged from his protracted audience with the Chief Executive, however, he sank into the comfort of an office couch and said:

"The principal subject discussed was the situation of the court reorganization bill.

"I see no prospect now of any adjustment or compromise and expect the battle will go on."

Close Senate Vote Seen.

"The vote in the Senate will be close, with fair prospects for passage of the bill. As to the time a vote on the court plan will be reached in the Senate, I am unable to make any forecast, but no reason has suggested itself for an unduly prolonged delay."

The Senator's report of "fair prospects" for passage of the bill was in contrast with the optimism of Postmaster General Farley following the Cabinet meeting.

"Why compromise?" the Postmaster General replied to questions. "The bill is going through."

Reminded of some of the Democratic Senators who have said they "can't go along with you," Farley replied:

"Well, when Senator O'Mahoney comes down here wanting help on a sugar bill, his conscience won't be bothering him, will it? Or when

Preakness Field Facing Rain, Heavy Track; Kentucky Derby Winner Gets Post Place

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico Race Track, Baltimore, Md., May 14.—A horse, a horse, my kingdom for the right horse—that will be the theme song at this track tomorrow afternoon as coronation week ends with the forty-seventh running of the historic Preakness. Upward of 40,000 equine-minded persons, some regular and some occasional turf fans, are expected to watch the crowning of the 1937 champion of the mile-and-three-sixteenths race first won by Survivor in 1873, two years before the initial Kentucky Derby.

HAIGHT.

Around the caviar dishes and in the bread lines of Baltimore tonight there are two words that spell "right horse" in most minds. They are War and Admiral. Put them together and you have a game, fleet collection of horseflesh that many believe will dominate the running of the Preakness just as he did in the Kentucky Derby a week before.

Just as War Admiral is taken for a matter-of-fact favorite in the Maryland classic, the filing of the entries this morning brought no surprises. The eight 3-year-olds of assorted sexes were the entries just as the turf "experts" had predicted they would be.

The white sheet that insured Jerome H. Louchheim's Pompoon a post position was first to be dropped into the box and the Glen Riddle Farm's War Admiral, the colt that will be backed for first, was last to get in line.

Between the two came Joe W. Brown's Jewell Dorsett, the only "gal" in the field; Walter M. Jefford's Matey, winner of the Pimlico Futurity last year; Miss Julia Loft's Mosawire, New York ace this spring; John Hay Whitney's Flying Scot, a "dark horse" son of The Porter; Over the Top, a stable mate of War Admiral until purchased by Mrs. W. H. Furst this week, and Merry Maker, pride and joy of Trainer Willie Shea and due to run in the colors of Miss Eunice Rand.

Track officials don't know whether to laugh or cry about the rain that turned the track into a whirlpool of mud. The series of thunderstorms which finally turned into a steady drizzle may be the saviour of the Preakness as far as making it a horse race is concerned. However, it may serve to cut down the attendance.

It was over a fast track that War Admiral turned in the second fastest time ever recorded in a Derby. Due to the fact that he finished second in his only mud race, many who otherwise might sting only with Charlie Kurtsinger's mount, probably will be trying to "knock him down" with an off-track horse.

The best mud record in the field is that of Merry Maker. The son of you better watch your shirt, or they will take it away from you."

"I'm inclined to agree with you," the youthful witness replied with a smile.

He sharply criticized section 77 of the bankruptcy act, enacted during the depression to facilitate corporate reorganizations, on the ground that "it is made to order to promote holding company control."

Wheeler produced a memorandum by the late O. P. Van Sweringen—once the dominant figure in the Nation's largest railway empire—describing a conference with Jones and other C. & E. I. creditors about the line's reorganization.

"Mr. Jones told the bondholders' committee that he didn't like their plan * * * and wanted to know if they were trying to unseat the management, saying 'you can't do that,'" the document read.

Wheeler then submitted documents in an effort to show that C. & E. I. traffic had not increased as a result of Van Sweringen control, and asserted:

"The Van Sweringens really want control of the C. & E. I. to keep it from lowering its coal rates. They don't want any competition with their other coal-hauling lines."

Charles M. Thomson, reorganization trustee for the road, interrupted to remark that the Van Sweringens' friendly relations with the Chrysler and Briggs auto companies and some Chicago packers would throw considerable business to the C. & E. I.

"Can you give me a single fact to back up that supposition?" Wheeler snapped.

"Well, I never talked with any of those people, so I can't give you any facts," Thomson replied. "I could never convince you anyway, Senator."

Thomson asserted that the Interstate Commerce Commission had threatened to cut his salary if he did not reduce the pay of the line's president, Charles O'Neal, from $40,000 to $25,000.

Wheeler, who contended that O'Neal's pay was higher than that received by officials of comparable lines, put in evidence a letter from Judge John P. Barnes of the Northern Illinois District, warning the the commission that "the court can not and will not permit any interference" with its trustee.

At the conclusion of yesterday's session, committee members said there would be no further hearings for the next two or three weeks.

Americans Asked To Study Brazil Political Trials

By the Associated Press.

A protest against the conviction and imprisonment in Rio de Janeiro of Luiz Carlos Prestes and other Brazilian political leaders was delivered yesterday to Ambassador Oswaldo Aranha by a committee of avowed liberals, headed by Rockwell Kent, New York artist and author.

James Waterman Wise, associate editor of the People's Press and director of the American League Against War and Fascism, reported later the Ambassador took personal responsibility in inviting a commission of "outstanding liberal Americans," to be selected by the group, to visit Brazil and investigate conditions under which the trials were held.

The statement read to Aranha expressed indignation over "cruel sentences" imposed by a special tribunal upon Prestes, Pedro Ernesto, former Mayor of Rio de Janeiro; Senator Chermont, four federal deputies, Arthur Ewart (sometimes known as Harry Berger, a former member of the German Reichstag) and 30 other political prisoners.

Roosevelt's Quiet Return to Capital Contrasts With That in 1934 After Congressional 'Revolt'

By Franklyn Waltman

WALTMAN.

It is a shame some one did not tell the President before he reached Washington that Congress was in "revolt" against his proposals. If that information had been passed on to Mr. Roosevelt he might have put on his "tough guy" act and frightened timid Capitol Hill out of its wits—and its revolt. Or perhaps the President's association with the mild tarpon of the Gulf of Mexico has had a demoralizing effect on him.

Contrast the President's return home yesterday with that from a fishing trip off the Florida coast April 13, 1934!

As the President left on that vacation, Congress overrode his veto of the independent offices appropriation bill, which restored to the veterans some of the benefits taken from them in the economy act of the previous year. Thus asserting its independence, Congress had a swell time rebelling against the New Deal while the President was fishing.

But as the Presidential train neared Washington, the Congressional Democrats suffered from their old timidity and they hastily improvised plans for doing penance and making ceremonial amends to Mr. Roosevelt. On the morning he arrived, several hundred House and Senate Democrats, led by the Vice President, Speaker of the House and the scarlet-coated Marine Corps Band, marched over to Union Station to welcome Mr. Roosevelt home.

The President lost no time in taking his cue from this unprecedented event. He made a speech which later he termed allegory, which some thought was facetious, but which Capitol Hill took seriously. Mr. Roosevelt meaningfully commented on the fact that while he was having a wonderful time fishing, Congress, he gathered, had been "having a wonderful time in my absence."

It was all right with him, the President indicated. We wanted Congress to "stay here just as long as you like," adding that in July and August the temperature rarely went above 110 degrees. He indicated he proposed to see that Congress finished the business he had outlined for it, even if it had to stay here all summer.

"I have come back with all sorts of new lessons I learned from the barracuda and sharks," asserted the President. "I am a tough guy."

This time while the President was away fishing for tarpon—a much milder fish than barracuda—Congress again kicked over the White House traces. It definitely developed that a majority of the Senate Judiciary Committee was opposed to the President's Supreme Court reorganization plan. Support for cutting the President's $1,500,000,000 relief proposal to $1,000,000,000, grew and, although by hard work the leaders seem to have mustered sufficient House strength to back the President on this matter, it is unlikely Mr. Roosevelt in the end will get the full figure he asked. And the usually docile House refused to make the CCC a permanent agency, as recommended by Mr. Roosevelt.

Aside from these specific evidences of the spirit of revolt on Capitol Hill, there is apparent an atmosphere of hostility in cloakrooms and private nooks and crannies not before noticed against Mr. Roosevelt.

It certainly seems that if ever there was a situation on Capitol Hill which called for a "tough guy," it is this one. But instead of proclaiming himself "a tough guy," Mr. Roosevelt even displays a little timidity by consulting with the Congressional leaders one by one instead of en masse, as he usually does. Was he afraid that this group would gang up on him again as they did in the conference on the relief bill? Or does the President believe it is easier to break sticks one by one than in a bunch?

Or can it be that in going after tarpon, the President lost some of the courage and iron which was put into his soul in his struggles three years ago with the predatory, voracious barracuda?

Perhaps all this is wrong. It may be that Mr. Roosevelt, competent politician and psychologist that he is, has come to the conclusion that the present Capitol Hill situation is too serious for facetious remarks about "tough guys" and requires cajolery and reasonable persuasion. At all events, the next few weeks will tell the story.

TVA "Go" Sign Given by U. S. Appeals Court

Injunction Halting Power Distributing Program Is Dissolved.

By the Associated Press.

Covington, Ky., May 14.—The Tennessee Valley Authority received from the Sixth United States Circuit Court of Appeals today a "go ahead" signal for continuance of the Federal Government's huge electric power program in six Southern States.

The court dissolved a temporary injunction granted by Federal Judge John Gore, of the Eastern Tennessee District to 19 private utilities and sent the case back to the lower court for a hearing of their suit to determine the constitutionality of the TWA act.

It held the injunction was against public interest, in that the loss the public would suffer through failure to obtain cheap electricity, "if it be found in the end that it may lawfully be supplied to them," could not be measured.

Similarly, the circuit judge said, the public interest in the achievement of "effective control of flood waters of the Tennessee River and its tributaries," was "beyond appraisal."

The decision brought from Representative Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi, the comment that TVA should "proceed at once" to use its surplus power "to electrify every home within 300 miles of the Norris, the Wheeler or the Wilson dams, in every direction."

He expressed belief the decision was a "death blow to efforts of the power trust to paralyze the Administration's power policies."

Secretary Ickes, chairman of the Administration power policy committee, expressed hope the dissolution of the injunction foreshadowed an end of what he termed "Government by injunction."

He asserted injunctions had retarded the recovery program for three years "and resulted in waste and extravagance." He viewed the decision as a "healthy sign" that courts might return to what he said was the former assumption that "a law was valid until proven otherwise."

Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, author of the TVA act, reserved comment pending a study of the decision.

Judge Gore, in granting the injunction last December, forbade TVA from starting any new construction but specified that the Authority might conclude construction already started. His order permitted the TVA to finish the erection of transmission lines to the edge of the City of Memphis, but prevented it from constructing the sub-stations necessary for distribution of its power.

Judges Charles G. Simons, Florence Allen and Charles Moorman agreed unanimously in vacating the injunction, but Judges Allen and Moorman wrote brief opinions disagreeing with portions of the opinion as written by Judge Simons.

The private utilities contended TVA contemplated construction of 149 power sites on the Tennessee River and its tributaries, each capable of distributing power to a radius of 250 miles. The utilities asserted the electric energy planned for production exceeded the total consumption of the area, which includes all of Tennessee and parts of Georgia, Kentucky, North Carolina, Alabama and Mississippi.

They contended execution of the program would irreparably injure if not wholly destroy their business and property and that the program was unconstitutional.

"Without denying that some injury may be suffered if the injunction is lifted," Judge Simons wrote, "it does not so clearly appear that it will of necessity overbalance the injury which must inevitably be suffered by the defendants (TVA) and the public.

"Human experience of the catastrophic effect upon great areas of overflowing rivers is too recent and too painful to permit of any doubt either as to the existence or the extent of the public interest that is threatened by the maintenance of the injunction and against which the threat to private interests must be balanced," he said.

"From such possible injury, it is clear no bond can adequately safeguard the public interest."

Australian Minister Asks Set-up Like League as Conference Opens.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 14.—A plea for a non-aggression pact of nations bordering on the Pacific Ocean, offered by Prime Minister Joseph A. Lyons, of Australia, marked the opening session of the imperial conference in which leaders of Britain's mighty but scattered empire met here today.

Lyons suggestion was the outstanding proposal before the empire statesmen convened for post-coronation consideration of imperial problems, primarily defense and foreign policy.

Few doubted Japan was in the mind of the premier of the British dominion which lies closest to the theater of Nippon's vigorous economic expansion. Lyons emphasized each dominion must be prepared to defend itself, but added:

Australia would greatly welcome a regional understanding and a pact of non-aggression by the countries of the Pacific, conceived in the spirit and principles of the League of Nations. Toward achievement of such a pact we are prepared to collaborate with all other peoples of the Pacific in a spirit of understanding and sympathy."

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, elected chairman of the conference, warned that "the international situation is difficult and even threatening."

Stressing the Empire's desire to "examine causes of international unrest" and contribute, if possible "to their dimunition or removal," Baldwin referred to Great Britain's $7,500,000,000 rearmament program.

"With so many of the most powerful nations of the world expanding their armed forces," he said, "we in this country have decided it is our duty to put our defenses in order at a cost the magnitude of which you know.

"We deplore the necessity of it, but we had no choice."

THE MODERN BLEND

You can easily judge the true quality of its tobaccos

We tell you that the tobaccos in Pall Mall, The Modern Blend, are the finest grown. Most cigarette manufacturers will say the same of their products.

But there is an important difference between these claims: You, yourself, can readily verify our statement. You can judge for yourself the fineness of Pall Mall tobaccos, but you must blindly accept the claims of quality for tobacco which has been artificially flavoured, sweetened, or medicated.

Pall Mall, The Modern Blend, is made of selected domestic tobaccos, enriched with choice Oriental tobaccos, and has no artificial flavouring or sugar-coating of any kind.

We invite you to try the new Pall Mall's straight tobacco flavour and let your own judgment tell you they're better naturally.

Royal Family Ranks Windsor In Fourth Place

Wallis' Standing Fixed in Line-up of British Nobility.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 14.—The Duke of Windsor has become the fourth ranking gentleman of England, a highly authoritative source disclosed tonight, and that fact may form the basis of a solution of the perplexing question of his duchess-to-be's place in the jealously guarded order of precedence of British royalty and nobility.

It means, this source indicated, that when Mrs. Wallis Warfield becomes the bride of the former King, she will become the eighth lady of the realm, following all other women of the immediate royal family.

Banner Shifted.

She may become "her royal highness"—as the Duke is insisting in opposition to the cabinet's contention she should not enjoy that title of royalty—but there will be no embarrassing question as to her rank relative to that of the Duke's sisters-in-law, the Duchesses of Gloucester and Kent.

She will definitely come after them and of course after the two queens and three princesses who precede them.

This indicated settlement of the status of the Duke and the future Duchess of Windsor, the high authority said, was the result of a recent picturesque happening, little known outside royal circles, but of highest importance to persons close to the top.

That was the shifting of the former king's banner of the Order of the Garter from its first position in St. George's Chapel, Windsor, to fourth position. He now follows his younger brothers, King George VI, the Duke of Gloucester and the Duke of Kent.

(The Order of the Garter is Britain's highest. Established in 1348 by Edward III, it includes the British sovereign, descendants of sovereigns, and such knights as are elected or admitted by statute.)

Status Retained.

The Duke of Windsor, it was explained, retained royal rank in spite of his abdication and renunciation of rights of succession for himself and his heirs. He still is "his royal highness," but whether his bride will be "her royal highness" awaits the pleasure of the King—acting on advice of his ministers.

When she becomes the Duchess of Windsor she will follow Queen Elizabeth, Queen Mother Mary, Princess Elizabeth, 11-year-old heiress presumptive; Princess Margaret Rose, 6½-year-old younger daughter of the King and Queen; the Princess Royal, Mary, sister of Edward and of the King, and the Duchesses of Gloucester and Kent.

[The Duke and Duchess of Kent will leave soon "for Europe," the United Press reported, ostensibly to visit the Duchess' sister, Princess Paul of Yugoslavia, but they will stop off en route to attend the wedding of the Duke and the American-born divorcee, the date of which has not yet been set, those close to the royal court said.

Kent Ruled Out.

[The purported settlement of the controversy, which remained deadlocked throughout the gayety of King George VI's coronation, was said to have carried a concession by the royal family whereby the young and handsome Duke of Kent may not serve as best man at the culmination of "the world's greatest romance."—Editor's note.]

King George and his radiant Queen Elizabeth, she in a gown of ivory lace, he in the trim blue and gold uniform of an admiral, entertained 2,000 guests, including 18 Americans, tonight in the first state ball of their reign.

American Guests.

This capped a brilliant day and followed Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's dinner in honor of the King and Queen. Two Americans, Gen. John J. Pershing and James W. Gerard, head of the official United States delegation to the coronation, attended the dinner.

The Americans attending the state ball at Buckingham Palace were United States Ambassador Robert W. Bingham, Mrs. Bingham and their daughter, Henrietta; Mr. and Mrs. Gerard, Joseph E. Davies, Ambassador to Russia, and Mrs. Davies; Gen. Pershing, Rear Admiral Hugh S. Rodman, who represented the United States Navy at the coronation; Curtis Bok, secretary of the United States delegation, and Mrs. Bok; Ray Atherton, counselor of embassy, and Mrs. Atherton; Col. Raymond Lee, military attache, and Mrs. Lee; Capt. Russell Willson, naval attache; Mrs. Willson, and their daughter, Mary.

Anemia Victim Is Dead After 85 Transfusions

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 14 (AP).—Mrs. Leo N. Vick, 40, who withstood the ravages of aplastic anemia for four years by borrowing blood through 85 transfusions, died late today at her north Chattanooga home.

She had been confined to bed since April 27, when she was given the eighty-fifth transfusion at a hospital. Aplastic anemia is a disease of the bone marrow. Physicians here said no other patient to their knowledge had survived so long.

3 Dangerous Criminals Flee Jail With 2 Others

Longview, Tex., May 14 (AP).—Five men, three of them known as dangerous criminals, escaped from Gregg County jail tonight and fled in a radio-equipped squad car after an exchange of shots with deputies.

The sheriff's office refused to reveal names of the men who, heavily armed, escaped via an elevator. The jail is atop the courthouse.

Camera! Wally and Edward on the Set

French photographers near Touraine enjoyed a field day picturing the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, who posed willingly at the Chateau de Cande while lensmen from the whole world converged on London for the coronation.

The Duke of Windsor was "Royal Highness" to the Knights of the Black Box when they asked him to chat informally with Mrs. Simpson as their shutters started to click.

And then a close-up. The happy couple were content to pose until everybody obtained enough pictures, a gesture typical of Edward, who willingly co-operated with cameramen when he visited the United States as the Prince of Wales.

Smiling happily together, the Duke of Windsor and Wallis Warfield Simpson remained in the garden of the Chateau de Cande, where the photographers packed up while fellow craftsmen at London were filming the coronation of King George VI, a historical event that Edward and Wally heard over the radio.

Washingtonian Is Feared Slain On River Boat

Walter Blount, HOLC attorney and distant cousin of the vanished man, said last night on his yacht Sunshine, docked here, that Keene had stopped at the Sunshine for a chat before sailing on the District of Columbia and was "laughing, joking and in the best of spirits."

Charles Osborne, jewel expert, in whose offices in the Union Trust Building Keene had desk space, said he had known Keene for 15 years and that so far as he knew he had never been subject to moods of despondency and had never mentioned suicide.

According to William Bowden, watchman on the river boat, he heard what he believed was a shot at about 1:45 a. m. yesterday, but he did not investigate because he was not certain. He reported hearing the sound to Norfolk detectives yesterday.

Discovered by Maid.

Keene's disappearance was discovered by Ella Montgomery, a maid, who entered his room after finding the door locked from the inside. She said her key pushed out the passkey which was in the lock. After a hasty survey of the blood-stained room she ran to the purser, T. J. Shannon, who summoned police.

If Keene was murdered or committed suicide, the act occurred in Chesapeake Bay, possibly near the Rappahannock. Because the act took place on the river there was some question as to jurisdiction in the case. The Potomac is Maryland territorial water. The act was discovered in Virginia. Keene was a resident of and sailed from the District of Columbia.

Formerly wealthy, Keene began life as an artist in New York. He latter studied architecture and was in the offices of the late Stanford White. After his marriage he moved to Washington, as his wife preferred to live here, and changed his profession to interior decoration, according to a relative. From that he switched to real estate, and has been dealing in country estates for almost a quarter of a century.

Business in Norfolk.

"He told me he had a deal in Norfolk," Osborne said. "He said, 'I'll be back Saturday. I have something down there that looks pretty good. I think I'll probably put it over.'"

Osborne said real estate men rated him one of the best judges of rural real values in this part of the country, and knew "every good piece of property within 50 miles of Washington."

Norfolk police reported they could find no passengers who had particularly noticed Keene. Among his scattered personal effects were found his driver's license, a receipted bill from the Fairfax Hotel, and a business letter relating to an old Texas estate in Vice President Garner's family.

Mrs. Clemence Keene, his wife, was near prostration at her hotel yesterday and declined to give any statement. She remained near the telephone waiting for news. She is well known as bridge expert here.

Keene formerly wore a beard, it was said, but a few years ago shaved it off. He was shy about photographs, and relatives said he had not had a picture taken in almost 30 years. He went into business for himself following a short period of association with the Shoemaker Co. at 1719 K street northwest two years ago.

New 'Sugar-Shock' Treatment For Insanity Being Extended

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, May 14.—Extension of the new "sugar shock" insulin treatment to all the main types of insanity, so that it now can be used on manic-depressives and obsessions as well as dementia praecox, was announced today to the American psychiatric Association, by Manfred Sakel, M. D.

Dr. Sakel is the young University of Vienna physician who two years ago amazed the medical world with a discovery that by giving insulin in doses massive enough to produce coma, and repeating this time after time, many cases of dementia praecox could be apparently cured.

Today he gave a new theory of insanity. The new "schema," he said, gave him the courage to give his patients more and more insulin, to see this treatment sink them step by step closer to death and get to know when to stop just before the borderline was reached.

He said to date about 1,000 cases of insanity have been treated with insulin in the whole world. American physicians reported nearly 100 insane given sugar shock in recent months with two or three deaths and about 50 per cent recoveries from insanity.

All the Americans emphasized the extreme danger. They agreed that the new treatment is a valuable experiment.

In manic-depressive insanity and obsessions, Dr. Sakel said, the insulin treatment has not restored as many cases as in dementia praecox. The obsessions, he added, are not entirely removed but are partly "erased" so that they become "blurred."

Obsessions are irresistible impulses to do foolish, unexpected or destructive acts. Normal persons all have them to slight degree.

Manic-depressives may suffer either from extreme exaltation, deep depression, or both alternately. Dementia praecox, also called schizophrenia, is split personality—its commonplace example the man who imagines he is Napoleon.

In Sakel's "schema," or theoretical picture of what insulin does to the brain, he conceived that the "psychoses" are due to brain messages transmitted to the wrong place.

For example, he explained, an insane person, seeing a man, might have a double image transmitted to his brain. One would be the normal visual image. The same sight message might be converted by another portion of the brain into what the aural area of the brain, the sound receiving portion, would take to be a sound.

This would explain the commonplace experience of insane persons who hear non-existent voices.

Consideration of this idea, Dr. Sakel explained, led him to the supposition that insanity might be due to the brain regularly scrambling its message, building up new, false transmission lines made of strings of nerve cells newly conditioned.

It is an observed fact, he said, that new and youthful brain processes are more sensitive to injury than old ones. He thought that the insane delusions could be considered new processes, the normal brain pathways old ones.

In that case any chemical which damaged brain processes would first destroy the newest ones. It would destroy the insane channels. And if its effects could be stopped at the right point, it would leave the old, normal processes perhaps undisturbed.

House Stages 'Stand-up' and Gains Recess

Interior Bill Trimmed in Stormy Session, but Not Passed.

information by House parliamentarians.

Now, the point of order turned on whether any work actually has been done on the Gila project. No one seemed to know, and Representative Jere Cooper, of Tennessee, in the Speaker's chair, confessed he was in "doubt."

Motion is Held.

But he ruled that lacking "sufficient documentary evidence actual physical construction of this project has begun," he must sustain the point of order.

With this settled, members felt they had done enuogh work for one day. Representative Jed Johnson, of Oklahoma, in charge of the bill, thought otherwise. In the absence of leaders, he had instructions to complete consideration of the bill. That, he told members was what he intended to do.

A storm of adjournment motions started at once. "There is no reason on earth to keep us here all night," shouted Representative John J. Rankin, of Mississippi, who moved at once "that the committee do now arise." Under pleas from floor assistants, Rankin agreed to hold up the motion "for 15 minutes."

Speaker Arrives.

"But I see no reason to wait," added Rankin.

As the House broke into a fresh uproar, Representative Sam McReynolds, of Tennessee, renewed the motion.

"The House clearly is in no condition to do business," said McReynolds. His motion carried 116 to 21.

Then came more motions to adjourn. Republicans, amused, and making full capital of the tangle, flung taunt after taunt.

Representative Earl C. Michener, of Michigan, said the Democrats were waiting for a Bankhead and Rayburn "to return and tell us what the President wants us to do tomorrow."

But before the spree got going again, O'Connor's eye caught Maverick's, and the Texan discussed shoes and ships and sailing wax in his "heart-to-heart" manner until tempers calmed down.

Tension was eased when the Speaker and leader arrived, to move an orderly adjournment.

Home-Building Value in April At 7-Year Peak

Establishing a new peak since May, 1930, the value of residential building operations started during April in 37 States east of the Rocky Mountains totaled $108,204,400, an increase of 61 per cent over the figure for April last year.

This was reported yesterday by the F. W. Dodge Corporation, statistical reporting agency in the construction field. The residential building commenced in April brought the volume of such construction in the 37 Eastern States to $339,782,400 for the first four months of this year, which is 78 per cent higher than the $190,986,600 reported for the corresponding four months of 1936.

The large increase in residential building operations commenced—based on contracts actually let and not the aggregate of building permits issued—was the highlight of the Dodge April report.

Total construction started last month in the 37 States had a value of $270,125,200. This figure included residential building and all other types. It was 16 per cent more than the total for April, 1936—which indicates nonresidential private construction and public works have fallen off.

Liquor Bill Advances.

Nashville, Tenn., May 14 (AP).—A bill to provide a liquor referendum in Tennessee sailed through the House of Representatives today, 57 to 36. The Senate has not yet acted on the question.

Franking Violation Is Charged by Holt

Senator Rush D. Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, last night accused Solicitor Karl A. Crowley, of the Postoffice Department, of misusing the franking privilege, and charged the Administration with operating a spy system against opponents of its policies, the United Press said in a copyright dispatch.

Holt said that Crowley sent a personal letter mentioning the fight over the Supreme Court reorganization in the Senate, to Stanley Boykin, Fort Worth, Tex., attorney, under postoffice frank as "official business."

Indian Girl Held In Spouse's Death

Buffalo, N. Y., May 14 (AP).—A 16-year-old Cayuga Indian bride was arraigned today on a charge of voluntary manslaughter in the fatal shooting of her athlete Seneca husband after authorities reported she told them of "constant abuse," climaxed when he made her get up out of bed and bake biscuits for his dog.

The young bride, Mrs. Norma White, an expectant mother, pleaded innocent and United States Commissioner Boyce H. Butterfield ordered her held for the Federal grand jury in default of $5,000 bail.

Glum and sad-eyed, Mrs. White before arraignment underwent a brief questioning by United States Marshal William J. Reardon regarding the death by shotgun wounds last night of 24-year-old Ivory White, professional boxer, football and lacrosse player.

Constitution Celebration Opened by Liberty Bell

Philadelphia, May 14 (U.P.).—Thirteen dull notes from the Liberty Bell—one for each of the original States—today sounded the opening of Philadelphia's celebration of the 150th anniversary of the United States Constitution.

Using a mallet of dogwood brought by relays of boy scout runners through the rain from historic Valley Forge Park, Mayor S. Davis Wilson tapped out the opening of a celebration which will continue until September 17, the sesqui-centennial of the signing of the Constitution.

Rescued Miner Dies.

Tamaqua, Pa., May 14 (AP).—William Hosler, 26, coal miner who was rescued from an abandoned coal hole Monday after being entombed for 17 hours, died today.

Girl Is Innocent, Says Ex-Teacher, Held for Killings

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., May 14 (AP).—Lester Brockelhurst, 23-year-old former Sunday school teacher wanted for murder in three States, today insisted that the girl who accompanied him on his tour of crime was innocent. The pair was arrested yesterday.

The girl, Bernice Felton, 18, held in jail here with Brockelhurst, is the daughter of Abraham Felton, of Rockford, Ill., the man who sponsored a parole for Brockelhurst, obtaining his release from Joliet Penitentiary where he had served a short term for an armed robbery in Chicago in 1935.

Miss Felton, who met Brockelhurst through her father's efforts in his behalf, today professed her love for the accused killer. Assistant District Attorney Eli Gellert, of Dutchess County announced that Illinois would be given first claim to Brockelhurst for the murder of a tailor in Rockford, the youth's home town. He is also wanted for killings in Arkansas and Texas.

Father Divine Released; Harlem Disciples Howl

New York, May 14 (AP).—Amid tumultuous shouts by his followers, Father Divine, self-styled God of Harlem, was dismissed on charges of felonious assault today as an aftermath of a stabbing fray in his "No. 1 Heaven" in upper Manhattan.

Magistrate Leonard McGee dismissed the case when none of the witnesses could identify any of the assailants in the melee that sent Harry B. Green, a white contractor, of Weehawken, N. J., to the hospital with serious stab wounds.

2 Parkers Named As Kidnap Leaders

Newark, N. J., May 14 (AP).—Ellis H. Parker, famed rural detective, and his son, Ellis, jr., were named today as principals in the alleged plot to kidnap Paul Wendel by a confessed participant who calmly re-told the story of Wendel's seizure and torture to a Federal court jury trying the Parkers on a charge of conspiracy.

Dapper Murray Bleefeld, who pleaded guilty to both the Federal indictment and a New York State charge of kidnaping Wendel, declared the elder Parker brought him into the alleged conspiracy and kept in constant touch with its progress. The junior Parker, he asserted, "rehearsed" him and his associates for the abduction and directed the "third degree" administered to Wendel before he "confessed" that he kidnaped baby Charles A. Lindbergh, jr.

Police Sifting Ashes For $15,000 in Jewels

Great Neck, N. Y., May 14 (AP).—A squad of men directed by three Nassau County detectives were sifting ashes in the municipal dump tonight in search of $15,000 worth of diamond jewelry Dennis King, the actor, said his wife had thrown away in a hat box.

Mrs. King said she put the gems there for safe keeping while their Long Island home was being redecorated, and then forgot about them and threw the box away.

7 D. C. Dealers To Deny Gas to Drunk Drivers

Distributors Pledge Aid in Safe Traffic Campaign; Committee Named.

who drinks and the drinker who drives."

"We are greatly encouraged to receive this gesture of co-operation from local service stations and wholesale gasoline distributors," said Van Duzer. "The drunken driver is one of our major problems and contributes to a large portion of our problems. To stop him before he gets started, we feel, will materially reduce highway recklessness."

It also was learned yesterday that a movement will soon be started on Capitol Hill to eliminate all-night parking on Washington streets. Legislation, it was reported, will be recommended to reduce night parking gradually over a five-year period.

A survey by the Department of Vehicles and Traffic several years ago indicated that 80 per cent of available space throughout the city could be used for garages.

In the past there has been considerable opposition to the elimination of all-night parking, although the city has been repeatedly condemned for making its streets "public garages."

Among local gasoline distributors who agreed to co-operate with traffic authorities were Sherwood Bros., Inc.; the Gulf Oil Corporation, the Texas Co., the Sun Oil Co., the Shell Eastern Petroleum Products, Lord Baltimore stations and Crew Levick.

Plans to establish a permanent traffic safety council yesterday received hearty support from local officials.

"It is one of the finest movements toward reducing our highway toll ever taken in the city," said Van Duzer.

"It is a splendid idea and has my support," said Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran.

"I am in hearty accord with the plan—more power to it," said Assistant Traffic Director M. O. Eldridge.

Plan Generally Favored.

Similar comments came from many other officials, civic and Government.

The organizing group, it was reported, will take immediate steps to launch the movement on a city-wide basis.

Meanwhile, Senator Augustine Lonergan, of Connecticut, gained Secretary of Commerce Roper's approval of a bill providing for compulsory vehicle inspection here. Lonergan is sponsoring one of two bills on the subject.

In a letter to the Connecticut Senator, Roper declared that such inspection was the cheapest form of insurance and quoted figures to show that in some States 70 per cent of cars involved in accidents have been found to have mechanical defects.

Meanwhile, the Keystone Automobile Club yesterday took issue with Secretary Roper's recent contention that defective motor vehicles are a predominant cause of traffic accidents.

"An analysis of all traffic accidents in Washington for the period from January 1, 1928, to June 30, 1936," said the Keystone Club, "reveals that of 67,433 cars involved in mishaps, only 1,617 were mechanically defective. This is 2.4 per cent of the total accidents."

Last year Department of Vehicle and Traffic records show, 8.8 per cent of all local accidents involved defective foot brakes and 10.2 per cent defective hand brakes.

Urges Taxicab Reduction.

The Southeast Council on Traffic, a group made up of representatives of all Southeast civic organizations, last night recommended that the number of taxicabs in Washington be reduced to 2,500.

In a meeting at the branch public library, Seventh and D streets southeast, the council discussed various aspects of the local traffic situation, including the problems of parking, congestion and location of hack-stands.

Among those present were M. O. Eldridge, assistant to Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer; Police Inspector W. E. Holmes, Capt. Joseph Morgan, of the Fifth Precinct; Capt. Richard Mansfield, of the Ninth Precinct, and George Keneipp, manager of the Keystone Automobile Club.

47th Victim Dies.

Washington's forty-seventh traffic victim of 1937 died yesterday, as two others were seriously injured during the day.

Elmer Barham, 39, of 102 Ridge road southeast, was killed when the door of the car in which he was riding opened suddenly, pitching him into the street and against a telephone pole. He was taken to Gallinger Hospital, where Dr. T. F. Graham, of the hospital staff, said he had died of a broken neck.

Ellen Coleman, colored, 34, of 1624 Eleventh street northwest, was in a serious condition at Freedmen's Hospital late yesterday, suffering from a possible fractured skull and body bruises. She was injured while standing on the corner of Eleventh and R streets northwest, when a truck, operated by James Carrington, colored, 21, of 2420 K street northwest, collided with a car operated by Chimes Sowers, 26, of 1000 M street northwest.

Jury Exonerates Motorman.

Earlier a coroner's jury yesterday exonerated a street car motorman after an inquest in the traffic death of Henry J. Kittenger, 71, 911 First street northwest, who died in Sibley Hospital May 4.

Meanwhile, police completed investigation of two deaths which occurred Thursday night. Inquests will be held next week.

The deaths were Mrs. Annie Cordier, 88, 3248 N street northwest, and George L. Morton, 78, Ontario Apartments.

Kittenger succumbed to injuries suffered when he was knocked down at First and H streets northwest by a street car operated by Floyd Little, 35, 203 C street northwest. The jury exonerated Little, returning a verdict of accidental death.

Revolt Among Rebels?

Madrid, May 14 (AP).—Heavy fire was exchanged tonight by two sections of the insurgents besieged in University City, reported Gen. Jose Miaja, commander of the defense of Madrid, who said it appeared there was a revolt within the insurgent ranks.

To Oust Anarchists.

Madrid, May 14 (U.P.).—The loyalist government tonight was reported ready to oust Anarchist sympathizers from the cabinet. Four cabinet members belonging to the CNT (National Confederation of Labor, which is controlled by Anarchists, will be removed from office, according to reports from Valencia.

Feeling against Anarchists increased throughout the country as a result of an Anarchist revolution in autonomous Catalonia.

Britain Continues Inquiry.

Gibraltar, May 14 (AP).—British naval authorities tonight tentatively accepted the explanation that a floating mine caused the explosion which badly damaged the destroyer Hunter off Spain's southern coast yesterday, while two British inquiries continued efforts to fix responsibility.

At least eight of the British warship's crew were killed and 14 injured in the blast off government-held Almeria.

While the Brtiish navy tried to determine who laid the mine, the Spanish government and the insurgent regime each tried to place responsibility on the other.

An official British announcement said early investigations "suggested" the destroyer struck a mine, but further details were withheld until the ship could be docked. Arrangements were being made to tow her to this port.

Vatican Offers Mediation.

Paris, May 14 (U.P.).—Diplomats said tonight that the Vatican had offered to mediate between rebel and loyalist Catholics in an attempt to end the bloody fighting around Bilbao.

The Basque mission here admitted that certain non-Spanish intermediaries have proposed a peace or an armistice. Pope Pius XI has been deeply affected by the slaughter which has taken a toll of 15,000 loyalist alone, according to rebel figures.

Italians In Drive.

Guernica, May 14 (AP).—Italy's "Black Arrow" legionnaires, cited earlier this month for their part in the capture and defense of Bermeo, marched today with the Spanish insurgents on Mount Jata, lofty key to Bilbao on the north.

Whipping Costs $125.

Scranton, Pa., May 14 (AP).—A jury today ordered Louis J. Welsh, principal of the Scott Township School, to pay damages of $125 for whipping 15-year-old Stanley Hacken when he found the boy smoking on school property last October.

ity as a proper basic figure for such loans, but this is only tentative.

But this loan would be conditioned upon the supplies of the commodity which were available, sliding down as the supply increases.

To enforce this program, the bureau would rely upon the benefits to be so attractive as to induce most farmers to sign the required contracts with the Government, giving the Secretary of Agriculture the right to reduce their base acreage up to 20 per cent.

"Non co-operators would be further penalized," said the bureau, "in case (of) excess production, by being forced to store their share of the surplus under seal, and to reduce acreage the following year, not only by the percentage that co-operators are asked to reduce for that year, but by an additional per cent to offset his overproduction the previous year."

Penalty taxes are not called for in the present draft.

To economy advocates, the bureau said last night the plan "will not require much Government money" and that "the farmer wants a price, not heavy Government payments." Funds for soil conservation payments would be diverted, under this program, to the loan and production-control payments.

Funds for the soil conservation program are now before the Senate, under a recommendation by a Senate committee for a reduction from $500,000,000 to $440,000,000. The assumption is that the farm leaders believe these funds will be sufficient to initiate the new program.

This bill has been drafted by Frederick P. Lee, Washington attorney for the Farm Bureau, in co-operation with AAA counsel, and there appears little question it will have at least tacit Administration support.

It will be submitted today to leaders of the National Grange, the Farmers Union, the National Co-operative Council and the Farmers National Grain Corporation, but it is expected they will approve it in substantially present form.

signments will be taken by the three men who formerly worked one district individually.

The men, Sergts. Howard Ogle, Thomas McVearry and Louis Wilson, will combine their efforts as a squad.

The same situation will prevail in the Seventh and Eighth precincts, with Sergts. Norman Hodkinson and Eugene Lambert sharing the work.

Sergts. John Caton and Thomas Nally will handle the assignments for the Sixth and Tenth districts.

The principal changes are those in the Third and Second precincts, where Inspector Thompson said crime has been increasing steadily. The other changes, he said, come as result of a recent survey which revealed numerous weaknesses in some of the districts.

Other changes involve the transfer of Detective Sergt. Paul E. Ambrose from the pickup squad to the robbery squad, and Curtis Trammell from the Second Precinct to the clothing squad.

York-Miami run of Eastern Air Lines.

Lambie, his co-pilot on the transport route as well as on the transatlantic venture which began at Floyd Bennett Field last Sunday, was spruce and smiling.

"I am awfully glad to be back," he said. "We are pretty tired. It was a long trip."

Average 144 Miles an Hour.

Half-carried through the throng into the administration building, the grinning pilots praised Rickenbacker and his aides for radioing information that helped them fly a true course across the sea that has claimed so many aviators' lives.

"We flew across at 165 miles an hour, on the average," Merrill said, "and returned at an average of 144 miles.

"I feel very well, except that my ears are ringing like the very devil.

"The motors worked perfectly and the automatic pilot gave a wonderful performance."

After notifying Newark Airport at 1:15 p. m. that he was "circling for a hole" in the 1,000-foot ceiling, Merrill said he decided to come down through a rift over Squantum to check the gasoline gauge, which was failing to register.

Acting Mayor William F. Brunner extended an official greeting to the fliers when they landed here. Other welcomers included Lambie's parents, Bernice Claire, a night club singer who has been seen frequently with Merrill, and Ben Smith, Wall street broker who backed the flight.

The fliers, who shuttled news pictures of the Hindenburg disaster and the coronation back and forth across the ocean and termed it strictly a commercial flight, made the eastward crossing in 21 hours and 2 minutes.

'Chickamauga Drummer Boy' Dies in Texas

"Little Johnny Clem, the Drummer Boy of Chickamauga," whom Washingtonians knew as Maj. Gen. John Lincoln Clem, U. S. A., retired, died at San Antonio, Tex., yesterday afternoon.

The man, who entered the Army as a 10-year-old drummer boy, served through the Civil War, and had risen to the rank of major general when he was retired in 1916, would have been 86 August 13.

In May, 1861, Johnny Clem, an orphan, first tried to join the Union troops, but recruiting officers in the Third Ohio regiment turned him away. A year later, however, he ran away from his Newark, Ohio, home, and joined the Twenty-second Michigan Infantry by simply attaching himself to that unit.

Soldiers saw he was a "born fighter," and took him in as one of their own, giving him a uniform, drum and sawed-off musket. He was with his regiment at Chickamauga and Shiloh, and also took part in the battles of Perryville, Murfreesboro, Kenesaw Mountain, Peach Tree Creek, Nashville, Resaca and Atlanta. He escaped injury until the battle of Atlanta, where he was wounded twice.

Many Stories Told.

A host of stories surrounded the future major general. One explains how he got his nickname—"The Drummer Boy of Chickamauga." After he had been at the front at Chickamauga, his brigade was ordered to fall back, and Clem became separated from his regiment. Three bullets tore through his cap as he retreated, beating his drum, and a Confederate colonel rode up to take him prisoner.

Bewildered by the boy with his misfit uniform, his drum and sawed-off musket, the colonel laughed heartily. That was too much for Johnny Clem. He fired at the officer, killed him, and made his way back to his regiment under cover of darkness.

When the story of his bravery circulated among Union soldiers, Gens. Rosecrans and Thomas heard of his exploit. The latter promoted him to sergeant and made him his orderly. He became the youngest soldier ever to wear the chevrons of a noncommissioned officer in the United States Army.

After the war, John Lincoln Clem—he adopted his middle name in 1864 because of admiration for the President—returned to Newark, graduating from high school there in 1870. Gen. Grant, then President, shortly commissioned him a second lieutenant of Infantry in the Regular Army, without further schooling or examination. In 1875, the former drummer boy had graduated from the Artillery School at Fort Monroe, Va., and was on his way to Army high commands.

Lived In Washington.

From 1903 to 1906 he served as chief quartermaster of the Philippine Department, later serving similarly in the Department of Texas and the Department of the Great Lakes. In 1915, he was made a brigadier general, and a year later—after 48 years in the Army—he was retired as a major general.

Gen. Clem lived in Washington for many years, making his home at 1870 Wyoming avenue. The last officer with Civil War service on the active list of the Regular Army, he served as chairman of the Fredericksburg-Spottsylvania Battlegrounds Commission as commander of the District of Columbia Commandery, Loyal Legion, as president of the Society of the Army of the Cumberland, and as a prominent figure in the G. A. R. He also was a member of the Military Order of the Spanish War, and formerly a thirty-second degree Mason.

Several years ago, Gen. Clem became a Catholic, attending St. Matthew's Church in Washington, where funeral services will be held Tuesday. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday, after the services.

Fred W. Mixer, Union Veteran, Succumbs at 92

Heart Attack Is Fatal to Soldiers' Home Inmate; Rites Monday.

Sergt. Fred W. Mixer, 92, one of the few remaining veterans who wore Yankee blue in the Civil War, died late Thursday at the hospital at Soldiers' Home of a heart attack.

He was junior vice commander of Kit Carson Post, No. 2, Grand Army of the Republic, and his passing yesterday thinned the ranks of the group to seven.

Only last Memorial Day Sergt. Mixer participated in the parade, although he rode in an automobile furnished by the Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War. His fond hope was to participate this year.

As a youth in his teens, Sergt. Mixer joined the Union Army early in the war and fought from Fredericksburg to Appomattox. Battles in which he participated included the Wilderness and Cold Harbor.

He was a native of Boston and spent his war days in the Twelfth Boston Light Artillery. After the war he remained in the Regular Army, and took part in the Indian wars. At the time of his retirement many years ago he was a member of the Seventh Infantry.

Sergt. Mixer left no relatives, as far as his G. A. R. "buddies" and members of the Daughters of Union Veterans know.

Funeral services will be held with military honors at Soldiers' Home chapel Monday at 10:30 a. m., followed by burial in the home's cemetery.

John Burke, 78 Ex-Treasurer, Governor, Dies

North Dakotan Served 8 Years Under Wilson; Also Was Jurist.

By the Associated Press.

Rochester, Minn., May 14.—"Honest" John Burke, 78, who earned that appellation through a long career which included eight years as United States Treasurer, six years as Governor of North Dakota and 13 years on the North Dakota Supreme Court bench, died today.

Death came in a hospital eight days after Judge Burke underwent an operation to relieve a pulmonary congestion.

Gov. William Langer commented in Bismarck that "North Dakota has lost its leading citizen, the outstanding man of the State."

The aptness of Mr. Burke's sobriquet, "Honest John," was demonstrated in 1922 when a New York brokerage firm of which he was a member went to the wall causing the loss of large sums to its customers and precipitating a grand jury investigation.

Mr. Burke, who had taken little active part in conducting the business, waived immunity and turned over his entire personal fortune, even a paid-up insurance policy, to help make up the creditors' losses. He was absolved of any personal wrong-doing, although several indictments were returned against his partner, Louis M. Kardos.

Born near Keokuk, Iowa, in humble circumstances, Mr. Burke was educated at Iowa State University and took up the practice of law with his brother in Des Moines. Two years later he went to Rolette County, North Dakota, where he started the career that was to see him attain the United States treasurership, win and lose a fortune and, at 65, gain a place on the North Dakota Supreme Court bench.

During the first part of his political life, Mr. Burke served as a county judge and served terms in both houses of the State Legislature. In the years that followed he became one of the leaders of the Democratic Party in the State, and in 1907 was elected Governor, being swept into office with 25,000 plurality.

He was re-elected Governor in 1909 and again in 1911. At the conclusion of his third term he was appointed Treasurer of the United States, serving until January 2, 1921.

It was after he left office that Mr. Burke entered into the brokerage business that was to take the fortune he had accumulated as a trial lawyer. The enterprise failed less than a year later.

Penniless, Mr. Burke turned to North Dakota and resumed law practice with his son, Thomas.

In 1924 he led a field of five candidates for the State Supreme Court. He remained a member of the court until his death, serving for four years as chief justice. Surviving Mr. Burke are his wife, the former Mary Kane, of Waukesha, Wis., and three children.

Bill Aimed to Halt 'Carpet-Bagging' Of Federal Posts

A bill to keep the "carpet-baggers" out of the States was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Hendricks (Democrat), of Florida.

The measure provides that all Federal jobs, save of an executive or highly skilled character, shall be filled, when outside the District, by bona fide residents of the States in which the positions are located.

Candidates must have been accredited residents for a year before assuming office.

Exemptions are allowed for employes above Grade 8 in the professional and scientific categories and Grade 11 in the administrative and fiscal services.

Lutherans Plan Special Service On Whitsunday

Dr. Hepner, of Japan, to Speak at Church of Reformation.

Whitsunday, the birthday of the Christian Church, will be observed with special services at the Lutheran Church of the Reformation tomorrow.

First of the services will be a special Sunday school assembly at 10:15 a. m., when Dr. Charles W. Hepner, of the Lutheran Theological Seminary of Japan, will be guest speaker. Thomas P. Hickman will preside.

At 11 a. m. services Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor, will preach on "The Church and the Kingdom of God." A roll call of the congregation will be a feature of the service.

Representative Richard Atkinson, of Tennessee, will discuss "Can One Be a Politician and a Christian?" at the 7 p. m. Senior Luther League service. Dr. Blackwelder will preach at 8 o'clock on "I Give My Life."

St. Mark's. Confirmation services will be conducted by the Rev. J. Luther Frantz, pastor, at 11 a. m. His sermon will be on "The Christian's Crown."

St. Paul's. The Rev. Henry W. Snyder, pastor, will preach at the morning service on "Other Tongues." In the evening his theme will be "Christ Our Mirror."

St. Stephen's. The Rev. Sam H. Kornmann, pastor, will preach at 11 a. m. on "The Day of Pentecost." The choir will render special numbers at the 7:30 p. m. service.

Grace. The story of the Pentecost will be told the congregation in a sermon by the pastor, the Rev. Gerhard E. Lenski, tomorrow. The subject will be "The Christian Church and This Unbelieving World." Marvin Hartung will lead the Young People's Society at 6 p. m.

Georgetown. The Rev. Harold E. Beatty, pastor, preaches tomorrow morning on "The Great White Throne." Miss A. Barbara Wiegand, secretary of the Women's Missionary Society of the United Brethren Lutheran Church in America, will address the Young People at 7 p. m.

Christ. The Rev. J. Frederic Wenchel, pastor, preaches at the morning hour on "No Man Can Say That Jesus Is the Lord Except by the Holy Ghost."

Luther Place Memorial. Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen, pastor, will conclude his series of pre-Pentecost sermons at 11 a. m. tomorrow when he preaches on "The Holy Spirit Identifies the True Church."

Dorothy Emerick will discuss "Life Service" before the Intermediate Luther League at 6 p. m. At the close of the service the Rev. Edgar D. Ziegler, assistant pastor, will receive a group of young people into the membership of the league in a candlelight consecration service.

Trade Board Holds Shad Bake Today

Legislators, businessmen, District officials and professional men will attend the Board of Trade shad bake at Bay Ridge, Md., today.

More than 1,200 are expected to make the excursion, Robert J. Cottell, executive secretary, said yesterday. Distinguished guests will include a half dozen Senators, eight or ten Representatives, Engineer Commissioner Dan I. Sultan, Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat, of District Court; Police Chief Ernest W. Brown, and numerous other officials.

At 9:30 a. m. he addresses the Sunday school at Brookland Baptist Church and at 7 p. m. the Christian Endeavor Society at Westminster Presbyterian Church.

Mountain Renamed.

Denver, May 14 (AP).—A 14,250-foot peak at the crest of the Continental Divide, 15 miles southwest of Telluride, henceforth is to be Mount Franklin Roosevelt instead of Mount Wilson, a special legislative committee said today.

Today's Sermon

Executive Secretary, Washington Federation of Churches.

"Christians of America, Unite!"

This was the final message of Dr. Stanley Jones when he was leaving for India after the conclusion of the great preaching mission last winter. It was a clarion call to a closer fellowship of our Protestant people. This is one of the most urgent needs of our generation. We should take the situation seriously and give the subject earnest prayerful thought. The forces of Christianity all over the world are weakened by needless division. Too often there is rivalry and competition where there should be co-operation and mutual helpfulness.

The Saviour prayed "that they all might be one." That spirit of unity which he ardently desired for His disciples then is greatly needed now if His followers today are to have their largest usefulness. It is growing steadily as Christians realize that the things upon which they agree are so much more numerous and important than those about which they differ.

The task of bringing in the Kingdom of God, the reign of righteousness and love, of peace and brotherhood, requires the utmost endeavors of all His people. We are thankful for the larger fraternity developing on every hand throughout America. May it conitnue and increase, so that the Church of Christ may possess greater power in its conflict with evil and its struggle for the larger good.

Ohio Minister To Speak Here Twice Sunday

'The Spirit of Truth' Topic for Morning Service.

The Rev. J. Harry Cotton, D. D., minister of the Broad Street Presbyterian Church, Columbus, Ohio, will speak at services tomorrow in New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

At 11 a. m. services he will preach on "The Spirit of Truth." At 8 p. m. his subject will be "Unrecognized Providences."

Action to Recover Seized Fund Fails

Hermann Wessels, a former lieutenant in the Imperial German Navy and now a naturalized American citizen yesterday lost in District Court a suit to compel the Government to refund to him a bank account of approximately $6,000 which was seized by the Alien Property Custodian during the World War.

Wessels contended the money belonged to him personally and not to the German government and thus was not subject to seizure. He brought suit against Attorney General Cummings as successor to the alien property custodian, and William A. Julian as treasurer of the United States.

In granting the request of the Government that the suit be dismissed, Justice James M. Proctor merely stated he would sustain the Government's position and quash the suit.

Sessions Data To Be Outlined By Dr. Clinchy

Cleric to Describe Programs of 2 Church Parleys Tomorrow.

Dr. Russell J. Clinchy, pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, who will be Congregational delegate to a series of world conferences in Europe this summer, will describe their respective programs and objectives in his 11 a. m. sermon tomorrow.

The minister will attend the World Conference on Life and Work at Oxford, England, from July 12 to 20, and the World Conference on Faith ond Order at Edinburgh, Scotland, from August 3 to 18. These meetings, held last at Lausanne and Stockholm in 1927, now are convening again after ten years. The Oxford conference will face the question of the place of the church in the modern state, and the Edinburgh conference will discuss the doctrinal basis and the order of the Christian Church.

The last of four Sunday evening forums under the auspices of the Brotherhood of Service will be held at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the church. Senator Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, will answer in the negative the timely question of "Shall We Revise the Supreme Court?"

Chevy Chase. Loyalty Sunday will be observed with the Rev. Edward G. Latch, pastor, preaching at the morning hour on "Value of the Church."

Metropolitan Memorial. The Rev. William Andrew Keese, pastor, preaches at the morning service on "The Pentecostal Presence."

McKendree. The Rev. Samuel E. Rose will preach tomorrow morning on the subject, "Our Sacred Business." In the evening he will give a talk on "Religious Phantoms."

Emory. The Ray Memorial window, the gift of Mrs. J. Enos Ray in memory of three generations of the family that have worshiped in the church, will be unveiled and dedicated tomorrow morning. The Rev. J. J. Rives, D. D., of Richmond, will preach the dedicatory sermon, and Dr. F. J. Prettyman, of Fredericksburg, Va., a former pastor, and the Rev. Horace E. Cromer, present pastor, will take part.

Lesson-Sermon Text Selected

"Mortals and Immortals" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Romans 8:8-9: "They that are in the flesh cannot please God. But ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, if so be that the Spirit of God dwell in you."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "The Lord knoweth the days of the upright: and their inheritance shall be for ever." (Psalms 37:18).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook: "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Mortals are not like immortals, created in God's own image; but infinite Spirit being all, mortal consciousness will at last yield to the scientific fact and disappear, and the real sense of being, perfect and forever intact, will appear."

St. Albans School, it has been announced, will be the beneficiary of approximately $20,000, which constitutes the residuary estate of the late Precentor of the Washington Cathedral, the Rev. Dr. William L. DeVries.

The greater part of this sum will provide one or more free scholarships for St. Albans students who are to act as cathedral crucifers or choir boys. There also will be a yearly medal given to a choir boy for excellence in singing.

Dr. A. A. Stockdale Will Preach Here

Dr. Allen A. Stockdale, former pastor of First Congregational Church, will preach the morning sermon tomorrow at Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South. His subject will be "The Hidden Treasure."

Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor of the First Congregational Church, will preach on "The Church's Eternal Tasks" at the 8 p. m. service.

There will be anthems sung by the choir under the direction of Dean Shure at each service. The quartet, David Manley, tenor; Le-Vergne Fairchild, soprano; Lily Garret, contralto, and Arthur Tabbutt, basso, will sing "The Voice in the Wilderness," by Scott, and "Hold Thou My Hand," by Briggs, as offertory numbers.

Clerics Announce 2 Sermon Themes

"Each in His Own Tongue" is the sermon topic Dr. Frederic W. Perkins, pastor, has announced for his sermon at 11 a. m. tomorrow in Universalist National Memorial Church.

After the service the young people and the Junior Y. P. C. U. will leave for a hike in Maryland. Warren Adams is directing the trip.

Clerics to Gather.

2 Congressmen Fan Flames of House Jealousy

Doughton, Treadway Add Fuel to Controversy on Security Inquiry.

the co-operative re-exploration of the subject, in a blast which expressed "serious doubt" that the "Democratic gentlemen" could understand the "complex and highly important problem." He also said worse things.

This brings us to Phase Four, or yesterday's first occurrence, which was a double-barreled explosion from Doughton, head of the House Ways and Means group.

Doughton, mincing no words and choosing his rhetoric with a fine eye to the sarcastic touch, said, in part:

"On February 22, 1937, shortly after he introduced his concurrent resolution and during the hearings, the senior Senator from Michigan, during his examination of the chairman of the Social Security Board (page 22), made an honest confession in which I am sure the country will heartily agree. I quote the senior Senator from Michigan, who stated:

"'Now let me confess that I haven't even remotely the necessary equipment to discuss this thing intelligently, but * * *'

"Thus spoke the senior Senator from Michigan in confessing his ignorance of a subject he terms 'a fiscal and economic menace.'

Insurance Company Heads.

"The 60 witnesses to which the Senator referred were all presidents of insurance companies, whose opposition might be based on selfish grounds, and who might be thinking particularly of the effect upon their investments * * *

"In this study the senior Senator from Michigan apparently does not desire to consult the farmers of the country, or to confer with recognized farm leaders, as this so-called advisory council, which he in part takes credit for naming, does not contain a single representative to speak for American agriculture, whereas there are six representatives to speak for labor, two of whom are also presidents of insurance companies * * *

"Of course, I have no objection to the senior Senator from Michigan having an advisory council to inform himself regarding matters upon which he has confessed his ignorance and does not have 'even remotely the necessary equipment to discuss intelligently.'"

Treadway Statement.

This statement had scarcely been made when another statement, or Phase Five, appeared, in which Representative Allan T. Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking Republican member of the House Ways and Means Committee, seized on the situation as a very fine opportunity to needle his Democratic colleagues, as the saying goes.

Phase Five, or Mr. Treadway, was a complaint that the "only function" of the Republicans on the committee "seems to be 'o meet with the full committee when the action of the Democratic majority, as determined in secret caucus, is to be formally ratified * * *

"If the Ways and Means Committee has been ignored, it is the fault of the Democratic members, since they had as much right to institute this investigation as the Senate. While the Senate was taking the initiative, they were content to wait for their orders to proceed from the White House."

Vandenberg Replies.

Now followed Phase Six, in which Senator Vandenberg, noting the Doughton statement, answered it calmly, but thoroughly, in part as follows:

"The technical and actuarial phases of the old age pension portion of the social security act are immensely intricate and I continue to frankly admit they require expert study. * * * Perhaps the great insurance executives of the country are wholly selffish in recommending changes, but I doubt whether their expert judgment can be so easily discounted. * * * The absence of farm representatives on the council is no reflection on the capacity of a group which must deal with mathematics rather than agriculture * * *."

Urges Co-operation.

"I deeply regret any clash with the distinguished House committee * * * This committee has not seen fit to do anything with the resolution for the study for more than three months. The Senate Finance Committee thought it worthy of immediate attention * * *.

"Personally, I would suggest that instead of initiating a name-calling contest, we should all unite in a nonpartisan effort to pursue the subject in this prudent and constructive way. So far as I am concerned I shall be delighted to have Chairman Doughton and his colleagues represented in any fashion which they desire * * *."

Phase Seven, or Armageddon, may not come until Monday, observers agreed, depending on the suitability of the weather for golf.

Ky. to End Deputy Pay by Companies

Frankfort, Ky., May 14 (AP).—The system of coal mine operators paying the salaries of mine guards who hold deputy sheriff commissions in Harlan County will end within the next few days, Gov. A. B. Chandler announced today.

The Governor's announcement followed a conference of Harlan mine operators. A sufficient number of State highway patrolmen will be sent into Harlan County to patrol the area and protect the lives and property of everyone, the Governor said.

Use of privately paid deputies as mine guards was condemned during the hearings held recently in Washington by the Senate Civil Liberties Committee investigating labor conditions in the southeastern Kentucky coal-producing county.

Taxi Driver Free On Liquor Charge

Because police found an unsealed bottle of liquor in his taxicab, Kenneth W. S. Porter, 32, first block Rhode Island avenue northwest, was hailed into Police Court yesterday. Judge Walter J. Casey dismissed the charge, however, when he learned Porter was unaware the package was in a dash board compartment.

Ford Launches Drive Against Union Activity

Directing 'Fordisms' at 'Iron Collar' of Labor Groups.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 14.—The Ford Motor Co. took cognizance of the United Automobile Workers of America's campaign to unionize its workers by announcing tonight that it will distribute to all employes cards bearing Henry Ford's labor views.

Harry H. Bennett, Ford personnel director, said the cards, labeled "Fordisms" and saying "our men ought to consider whether it is necessary o pay some outsider every month for the privilege of working at Ford's," will be distributed to the company's 150,000 employes throughout the country Monday.

"Fordism" Examples.

The "Fordisms" follow:

"A monopoly of jobs in this country is just as bad as a monopoly of bread.

"Our men ought to consider whether it is necessary to pay some outsider every month for the privilege of working at Ford's.

"What was the result of these strikes? Merely that numbers of men put their necks into an iron collar. We're only trying to show who owns the collar.

"Figure it out for yourself. If you go into a union, they have got you, and what have you got?

"We have always made a better bargain for our men than any outsider could. We have never had to bargain against our men. And we don't expect to begin now.

"There is no mystery about the connection between corporation control and labor control. They are the two ends of the same rope. A little group of those who control both capital and labor will sit down in New York and settle prices, dividends and wages."

Homer Martin, U. A. W. A. president, announced that the union would open its organization drive among Ford workers formally next week.

Truce in Saginaw.

Martin then went to Saginaw and appealed tonight to strikers at the Grey Iron Foundry of the Chevrolet Motor Co. to return to work pending negotiations. The strikers, who rejected a similar proposal yesterday, acceded to the request of the union head.

The plant will reopen Monday and negotiations over wage adjustments and production speed will be opened he same day. Shortly before the strikers decided to resume work the company had announced that the Chevrolet Motor factory at Flint, dependent upon the foundry for supplies, would close Monday.

Having settled tentatively the strike which left 5,500 foundry workers idle, Martin turned his attention to the sit-down strike which closed General Motors' iron foundry at Saginaw, throwing 1,500 out of work.

Body Plants Opening.

Cleveland, Ohio, May 14 (AP).—The General Motors Fisher Body Co. plant here will reopen Tuesday under an agreement reached today between United Automobile Workers Union officials and Lincoln Scafe, plant manager.

Picture Crafts Reject Verbal Peace Proposal

Asserts Every Actor Passing Studio Picket Line Will Be Strikebreaker.

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, May 14.—Leaders of the striking Federated Motion Picture Crafts unexpectedly rejected a verbal peace proposal from film producers today and declared that every actor who passes through studio lines will be classed as a "strikebreaker."

The rejection was announced from F. M. P. C. headquarters after a series of conferences of the unions involved.

Optimistic remarks earlier from individual spokesmen had indicated possible immediate settlement.

A statement from 35 members of the F. M. P. C. executive committee, representing 6,000 workers, declared the producers' offer was merely a maneuver to break the strike and split union ranks.

The executive committee statement charged the Screen Actors' Guild had played into the hands of the producers by accepting a separate agreement which F. M. P. C. leaders contend does not guarantee the union shop which the guild sought. Committeemen also expressed belief that organized labor of the United States would boycott pictures henceforth "starring strikebreakers."

Replying to the peace proposal made yesterday, the executive committee said:

"This verbal agreement provided:

"1. Return of all strikers to work at once.

"2. Future hiring through the union.

"3. Negotiations on hours and wages to open within five days.

"The proposal makes no mention of what disposition shall be made of scabs now working. The federation itself was not mentioned and the understanding was that each union would act separately in arriving at a settlement.

"This would mean, first, that the scabs who are attempting to break our front would not be definitely ousted and, second, by failure to recognize the federation and insisting upon a separate settlement with each local union the producers would be paving the way for playing one craft against another and further splitting the ranks of studio workers.

"We have the fullest confidence that the organized movement of the whole country, both A. F. of L. and C. I. O. will see to it that union men and women refuse to attend shows now and in the future starring strikebreakers."

2 Organizers 'Chased.'

Foley, Ala., May 14 (AP).—Mayor Frank Barchard said today a group of farmers and shippers escorted out of town yesterday two labor organizers who sought to organize shipping platform workers here. He said fists flew "once or twice" during the incident.

Sole Election Won By C. I. O. in Steel plant. Traffic was blocked for 20 minutes while union leaders addressed the crowd.

President Paul Normille of the local declared:

"We have won the greatest labor victory in history."

Earle Lauds Agreement.

Murray announced ending of the strike at conclusion of a brief meeting with Lewis, Federal Labor Conciliator James F. Dewey, Clarence Moser, of the State Department of Labor and Regional Labor Board Director Ernest C. Dunbar.

Gov. George H. Earle, who came to Pittsburgh to aid in the settlement, said: "This is a most happy solution. It is a high tribute, too, to the sanity of Mr. Lewis and Mr. Murray, as well as the mediators.

"Any company that does not meet with organized labor in the same spirit as Jones & Laughlin has, should be ashamed of themselves and assumes a frightful responsibility."

Pending the election under supervision of the labor board, not later than next Thursday, Lewis agreed to observe the terms of the union's contract with Carnegie-Illinois.

His consent to an election was the first public offer of a major steel company to recognize the union as sole collective bargaining agency since the start last June of the union drive under auspices of John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

Murray stated the understanding with the company provided for a "straight 'yes' or 'no' vote" by the employes on the question:

"Do you want the Steel Workers Organizing Committee to represent you in collective bargaining negotiations with the company?"

He expressed confidence that the answer would be "yes" and asserted the steel committee now had enrolled 500,000 of the industry's 570,000 workers in the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers. This figure was an increase of 170,000 over last month's membership report.

No Occasion For Sabotage.

The tripartite inquiry into the social security act to be conducted by the Social Security Board, three members of the Senate Committee on Finance and a jointly appointed nonofficial advisory group has encountered stormy weather. The Democratic members of the House Ways and Means Committee are reported to be deeply incensed by the failure to invite their co-operation and give them representation on the investigating body. Undoubtedly the Ways and Means Committee should have been consulted about any plans looking toward eventual amendment of the social security act. It is justified in demanding a part in these deliberations. But it would be an unwarranted act of sabotage for a group of Representatives to block an investigation designed to throw light on many difficult and controversial features of this far-reaching law.

The Social Security Board undoubtedly committed a tactical error in ignoring the House, but that appears to be the extent of its offending. It cannot be accused of exceeding its authority in launching an inquiry into the feasibility of amending the present law. On the contrary, among its specified duties is that of studying and making recommendations as to matters of legislation and administrative policy concerning old-age pensions and other related subjects.

There is good reason to suspect that the wrathful Congressmen are chiefly irritated by the presence of Senator Vandenberg on the Senate's special committee. Yet, as a friendly and informed critic of the present act, his assistance will be most valuable. Moreover, the participation of Senator Harrison, one of the Administration's staunchest supporters, is a guarantee that the results of the inquiry will not be turned to partisan advantage.

If members of the Ways and Means Committee are sincerely desirous of amending the present social security act in an intelligent and discriminating way, therefore, they should press for participation in this much-needed inquiry and not try to block it.

Control Of Rackets.

His investigations of organized vice and the restaurant "racket" in New York City have earned for Special Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey a well deserved reputation for fearless thoroughness as well as the thanks of law-abiding Americans everywhere. Yet, as Mr. Dewey said in an address before the Citizens' Committee on Control of Crime, his efforts offer no solution of the problem of organized crime. The really big task that confronts modern communities is the war against law-breakers.

The industrial "racket" is the type of crime most characteristic of modern conditions. It is defined by Mr. Dewey as the "systematic extortion of money or property by the use of force or fear from the various members of a legitimate or illegitimate industry." In law enforcement today we are, as he says, "still thinking in primitive terms of apprehending the footpad and the ruffian." This outmoded conception of crime has not provided the proper machinery for dealing with the modern predatory criminal whose victims are often numbered by thousands.

The successful racketeer is not an isolated prowler; he is often the head of a vast organization affiliated with politicians who sell protection and are advised by highly paid lawyers. He may seemingly be peaceful and thoroughly respectable. To establish and trace his sinister connections is a task that is a challenge to the wits and the courage of an investigator. Those who have read accounts of the vice inquiry in New York City or the investigation into the tie-up between trade-union officials and gangsters who blackmailed restaurant owners will realize the immensity of the task that confronted the special prosecutor in bringing these elusive racketeers to book.

Mr. Dewey says modestly that his only contribution has been to "demonstrate that organized crime is not above the law." That, however, is in itself an achievement in view of the obstacles that he encountered in the course of his inquiry. In the future Federal and State legislation regulating collective bargaining will eliminate some of the evils of industrial racketeering. But local vigilance will always be required to eradicate innumerable forms of organized extortion that thrive because their victims are afraid to protest.

Following the example set by other cities, a Citizens' Committee has been organized for New York under the leadership of Harry F. Guggenheim to study the problem of law enforcement intensively. Specifically this committee intends to keep a daily record of every manifestation of organized crime. In that way, many rackets may be discovered and suppressed before they have spread far. With information assembled and analyzed, the next step will be to reorganize local law enforcement agencies. In other words, the aim is to modernize the machinery for control of crime so that it will be able to cope with the methods of modern criminals.

Organizing For Safety.

A representative group of Washington citizens has decided that present traffic hazards can no longer be tolerated. That is the chief significance of the gathering which heard the message of Lieut. Franklin M. Kreml at the Willard Hotel Thursday night. Thoroughly aroused over the slaughter of citizens on the streets, this group has pledged itself to a continuing scientific attack upon traffic accidents.

It should be clearly understood that this movement is not just another safety drive. In fact, it is the antithesis of a drive. Instead of merely demanding that something be done or joining in an emotional denunciation of traffic conditions, this group aims to eliminate, so far as possible, the basic cause of accidents.

First, it is expected to set up a permanent safety council. Through that agency the underlying causes of motor crashes will doubtless be systematically studied. If the sound advice of Lieut. Kreml is followed, the council will then attempt to reduce the accident rate by every effective means at its command. Presumably its efforts will include more extensive training for drivers, stricter enforcement of the law and improvement of traffic facilities in the interest of efficiency as well as safety.

In every respect this is a community enterprise. Enthusiastic response to Senator King's suggestion that a safety council be formed came from representatives of all Washington's civic agencies represented at the meeting. If these groups pool their strength in support of a scientific safety program, there need be no doubt as to the outcome. The approach suggested by Lieut. Kreml has already proved its effectiveness in a number of cities.

One of the most encouraging factors in the meeting was Senator King's indication that the necessary funds will be forthcoming if local officials and civic agencies unite upon a constructive program. Co-operation on the part of Congress will be essential to secure adequate investigating facilities, improved highways and enough policemen to enforce safety regulations. Indifference to these needs in the past is undoubtedly a large factor in Washington's unenviable traffic record.

Nevertheless, the primary responsibility falls upon the community. For the most part it is the lives of local citizens that are being sacrificed to an obsolete system of traffic control. Consequently, civic leaders may well take the initiative in formulating a new safety policy. It is the prospect of close co-operation between this group, the local government and Congress, under the guidance of safety experts, which gives hope that sudden death, suffering and extensive property damage on Washington streets may be substantially reduced.

The Good Neighbor.

Tensions arising from the Spanish civil war are naturally increased by the damage caused a British destroyer while on coastal patrol in the Mediterranean. The serious injury to the warship, a unit in the international fleet enforcing the nonintervention agreement, is indicated by official announcement from London that eight men were killed in the explosion.

Both sides in Spain are trying to capitalize on the tragedy, the Spanish government by hinting that a German-built submarine torpedoed the British craft, the Fascists by alleging a "dastardly Red maneuver." Actually it seems already established that the explosion was caused by a floating mine. And since these have been laid outside Spanish ports by both combatants the responsibility may prove impossible to define.

But while the British will probably be willing to write off the disaster as an accident it should at least serve to draw attention to the constant difficulty of keeping the effects of the civil war confined to Spain. The consequent obligation on other powers to do whatever is possible to terminate this disastrous conflict is inescapable.

It is now over ten months since the outbreak of the rebellion. Today there is no indication of any early cessation of hostilities. From the military viewpoint the situation is one of almost complete stalemate. Meanwhile an important nation sinks daily deeper in an economic and political disintegration which renders the future black, regardless of who wins.

To terminate this senseless fighting while there are still foundations on which to rebuild in Spain is an imperative task of international statecraft. It is a service for which eight humble sailors on the shattered British destroyer have given their lives. These deaths emphasize that it is statesmanship which is derelict in its duty, not those who unquestioningly obey the orders given them.

The United States prides itself on being a "good neighbor." Under the leadership of Theodore Roosevelt we successfully intervened to bring the Russo-Japanese war to a close which undoubtedly saved thousands of lives and averted economic exhaustion for both belligerents. Apparently history is not going to record any such diplomatic triumph for this Administration. Great as our influence could be in mediating the Spanish struggle, no indication that we intend to pay more than an evasive lip service to the cause of peace is forthcoming in this serious crisis.

New Homes Make More Jobs.

Figures released today by the F. W. Dodge Corporation on residential building are of special interest at this time and constitute an encouraging factor of fundamental importance.

There is a satisfactory increase of 78 per cent in this type of construction for the initial four months of 1937, compared to the previous year, in 37 Eastern States. To be exact, in the corresponding four months of 1936 contracts let for residential building amounted to $190,936,600. The total for the first four months of the current year is $339,782,400.

If pump-priming public expenditures for construction are to be replaced in the program of recovery by private construction, it will have to come by the revival of residential building. In other words, resumption of home building is the most promising means of reabsorbing into private enterprise workers now employed by the PWA and the WPA.

In viewing statistics for construction, insufficient distinction is often made between public building or office building and the more important enterprise of residential building. Today the larger part of residential construction is in the outlying districts and suburbs—in the development of unimproved areas. New office buildings and public buildings are likely to be erected in the already highly developed areas of the towns and cities.

When residential construction expands in the suburbs it is not only houses that are involved in the cycle of economic activity thus set in motion. New homes call for the laying out of new streets, sewers, electric lighting, power lines, telephone lines, gas mains, water mains, new schoolhouses, new street lights, new sidewalks, and a multitude of activities incidental to the development of new residential areas.

It is encouraging, therefore, to note the apparent breaking up of the ice jam in residential building. This movement has been too long delayed. The current trend arouses positive hope that a really solid foundation for recovery and re-employment will be thus provided.

A Case Of False Economy.

Persistent spending in excess of revenue is dangerous business, as the President has recently emphasized. To accomplish their purpose, however, savings must be intelligently ordered. False economies are as dangerous as the extravagance they pretend to end.

A case in point is the 1938 appropriation for the Central Statistical Board. The law sets $180,000 as its maximum annual expense account. This year the House agreed to allow it $174,000. The Senate, however, eliminated the appropriation entirely—incidentally, without a record vote. In conference, a compromise was effected to give the board $87,000 and this amount was finally voted by both houses. What will the cut mean?

The Central Statistical Board was established in 1933 by executive order. Originally designed to facilitate the operation of the NRA, its functions were broadened and made permanent by an act of Congress in 1935 which authorized it to promote the development and co-ordination of statistical services both inside and, as far as possible, outside the Federal Government. In particular, it reviews and advises on plans to collect and tabulate data. One of its aims is to discourage duplications in statistical research. It also supplies economic advice on the basis of information gathered under its supervision.

In addition to its independent activities the board co-operates with various other agencies. The Bureau of the Budget, the Civil Service Commission and the Works Progress Administration have especially benefited from its services. In regard to the last, a committee composed of board members, WPA officers and others now passes on the many applications received for survey projects. This committee's word has usually been final.

Last year it advised approval for some $74,000,000 worth of WPA projects, while recommending rejection of undertakings that would have cost $279,000,000. And in each instance action was so ordered.

One does not need to be a supporter of the present WPA set-up to realize the value of a co-ordinating statistical agency in this and many other fields. A surface saving of $87,000 here may easily mean an undetected waste of ten times that amount.

Correction.

The Post yesterday in these columns credited the Senate conferees with the victory for common sense implicit in the proposed repeal of the "red rider." It has now been made clear that Representative Ambrose J. Kennedy, of Maryland, was responsible for the original suggestion that a clarifying proviso—included in the bill to eliminate an offensive amendment—might be agreeable to the House, which had previously held out for a compromise "pink rider."

Letters to the Editor

An Iowan's Reply.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of May 11, Hon. Cyrenus Cole, of Iowa, takes exception to a recent interview in which my efforts in behalf of the drought-distressed farmers of western Iowa were referred to. Apparently no longer a resident of the State, and confessedly an absentee farm landlord, Mr. Cole rises to resent the so-called slander that Iowa was either drought-bitten or dust-smitten last year, or otherwise plagued in a manner to depreciate the value of his absentee acres. I only wish that his indignation were as righteous as it is spontaneous.

As everyone knows, Iowa is some 400 miles from the dust bowl proper, but unfortunately Oklahoma dust is no respector of distance, and a drought hatched in New Mexico refuses to abide by the interstate commerce clause. Consequently, we have droughts and dust storms in Iowa, as the old reliable Department of Agriculture will attest.

If Mr. Cole's tenant farm was so fortunate as to escape the drought and dust he should congratulate himself rather than belittle the misfortunes of his neighbors. Where one such farm in northwest Iowa produced abundantly last year there were ninety-nine others where the crop was a failure, partially or wholly.

Mr. Cole spent some time in Congress in the good old Hoover days when any agricultural affliction was laughed off as purely a "local problem." The principal difference between farm conditions then and now is that after his crowd got out of office we started to do something about the situation.

Far be it from me to sell Iowa "short," and under the New Deal it is not necessary. Thanks to the Roosevelt policies, Mr. Cole is able to get respectable prices for the products of his absentee acres, but thanks also to the new economic trend his status as an absentee landlord is none too secure. More than 60 per cent of the farms in my district are operated by tenants, and if there is anything in agriculture more detrimental than drought it is farm tenancy. If it is any comfort to Mr. Cole I would like to advise him after we get the drought out of our systems we are going to tackle the tenancy situation next, and something is going to be done about that, too.

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the Editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, brevity is requested. Letters are subject to condensation.

I do not know where Mr. Cole was last summer when the searing finger of drought blackened the fields of northwestern Iowa, or where he was this past winter when the unfortunate farmers of my district cried out for fodder to save their perishing livestock and bread to put into the mouths of their women and children. I was out there among them and I know whereof I speak. Fortunately, the Resettlement Administration took a practical rather than a Pollyannish view of the situation, and approximately $2,000,000 were spent to save and rehabilitate the drought victims. Not nearly enough, but it helped.

In justice to Mr. Cole, however, I can appreciate the difficulty of visualizing conditions in Iowa from a position on the banks of the Potomac.

Daylight Saving Time.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I had not fully realized the menace in the pending legislation for daylight saving time in Washington until I listened to a radio address on the subject last night. I am of the opinion that the majority have not expressed themselves in regard to this matter. The statement was made that those who had so expressed themselves were overwhelmingly in favor of it. I have yet to come across one person who wants it.

The only argument in favor of it was that those who play golf, tennis or other outdoor games would have an extra hour of daylight in which to enjoy themselves. That would be just dandy, and they are at liberty to get up an hour earlier whenever they want to in the early morning hours when it is fresh and cool. It is a free country; at least it is supposed to be, but if the minority continues to regulate the majority as it seems to be doing in the present instance, before long we might as well be living in Russia.

As far as I am concerned, I am glad to see the sun go down on a hot, summer day. If daylight saving were to become effective, I would have to get up before 6 in order to get to work at 7:30. I would leave the office in the heat of the middle of a summer afternoon and sit down to a hot dinner at 5 o'clock with the sun blazing overhead. It is difficult enough now, when it is light after dinner, to get the children in to their lessons, but it would be even worse with another hour of daylight tacked on. I am sure that their studies would suffer.

I am not unmindful of the golfers. My father is one, and he is always late to dinner in the summertime. The cook grumbles because he is late, and he grumbles because he has to leave the links just when it is beginning to get cool. Having to come home an hour earlier would be just that much worse. Looking at the matter from this point of view, the only argument in favor of daylight saving goes overboard with a splash. Why can't those who want to enjoy outdoor sports get up an hour earlier in the cooler part of the day and leave the clocks alone?

The only fair way to give the majority what they really want is to have a vote on the matter. Many people who have not fully realized the fact that this legislation is about to be put over on them, or who would not write a letter or appear at that open meeting on Monday morning, would fill in a ballot and mail it to your paper.

DOROTHY T. BARCLAY.

From A 'Liberal Democrat.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent liberal decision of the Supreme Court have now opened the door for adequate social legislation, both Federal and State respecting wages, hours and working conditions. Therefore, whatever reasons may once have existed for changing the Supreme Court have now "gone with the wind." Despite this fact, we still find the court packing advocates bent on jamming the President's bill through Congress. In support of the scheme, many of its proponents glibly state that "it has been done before," thus implying that nothing unusual is involved rather than the unprecedented action which is really being attempted. It is difficult to follow the peculiar process of reasoning of the packing proponents in assuming that two wrongs would make a right. Moreover, let's see if "it has been done before."

Anyone looking up the history of the Supreme Court will find that in its first 75 years but four members were added. These additions were made by three separate acts of Congress. There was a generation between each act and they were, with one possible exception, justified by the increased work of the Court. The only other changes down to the present time have been a decrease of three members and a subsequent increase of two during "the Tragic Era" of Reconstruction, when political morality was at its lowest ebb. The number of justices was reduced during the incumbency of Andrew Johnson in order to prevent his making appointements to the Court, the radical Republicans then being engaged in hamstringing Johnson because he was attempting to carry on the sane and humane reconstruction policy started by Lincoln. Upon the election of Grant the ban was lifted. Incidentally, these manipulations of the Court's membership for political purposes were bitterly denounced by the Democrats of that day. And Grant indignantly denied packing the Court.

In view of the written record it can be asserted without fear of contradiction that during the century and a half of the Court's existence there is no precedent whatever for packing it with six new members at one time. Do we wish to set so dangerous a precedent?

Reactions To Westbrook Pegler.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your Mr. Pegler uses a whole lot of nasty words about labor racketeers—but he does not name a single union nor a labor racketeer. As his article stands it is an attack upon the whole labor union organization set-up.

Mr. Pegler has been a sports writer, and now and then does some pretty good stuff in other directions, such as Mussolini and the like. But he is evidently off his base very much when it comes to writing labor stuff.

The conventions of the A. F. of L. are on record a number of times, in language quite as vigorous as, and much more to the point than that Mr. Pegler uses, on the subject of racketeering labor unions. Moreover, they have co-operated very effectively with Mr. Dewey in New York City in the attack upon these parasites on the labor movement.

If Mr. Pegler will print the names of the unions and the labor racketeering leaders, in large type, he will gain the approval of the rank and file as well as the great body of labor executives.

But how long will his list be—for a movement which now numbers some millions of members, and thousands of labor executives?

W. R. GAYLORD,
Member, American Newspaper Guild.
Washington, May 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your good-natured Mr. Pegler in his "Fair Enough" has been "the talk of the town" ever since he's been amusing himself with the would-be conquerors, Hitler and Mussolini.

Mr. Pegler's vivid description of Mussolini's "invincible" legions in Spain, in their heroic advance to the rear, being pursued by the "Communist rabble" of Spanish ladies, is not only comical, but it is a fact and a very pleasant fact, indeed.

His humorous description of Mussolini's aversion to the words "Caporetto" and "Adowa" is simply magnificent. I am sure somebody will burst laughing when he reads it.

CORNELIUS JACKSON.
Washington, May 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When a writer of Mr. Pegler's stamp writes he is supposed to know what he is writing about. Does he? He mentions English and French soldiers going into Italy to stop the Italians from retreating into Sicily after Caporetto. Why does he not go on a little further and say that the allied high command advised the Italian command to retreat south of Rome? And that was where they sent a French batallion and English regiment. But the Italians stopped the enemy on the Piave, by themselves.

The Italians won their own war with the Austrian empire. Maybe Mr. Pegler will tell us who won the war in France. Let's see—there were Americans, English, French, Belgians and, believe it or not, Italians all fighting Germany.

On July 14, 1918, the Germans made a surprise attack, and the English and French scattered and fled like rabbits and if it had not been for the Americans and Italians holding their lines there might have been a different ending. All this is history in the book. I was there and witnessed the above incidents.

He mentions the Capones, Lucianos, Unione Siciliana and racketeers. Well, that seems more in his line. They used a rod, and Pegler uses the pen. But one must make a living. ALFIO CARTA.

Amoskeag Lives Again

MANCHESTER, New Hampshire's largest city, offers a dramatic example of what an embattled business community can accomplish through a courageous appraisal of current trends. For generations its industry had been dominated by Amoskeag Manufacturing Co., once the world's biggest cotton textile producer.

Amoskeag went under and out. Instead of adding their tears to the Merrimac River, business leaders organized a rescue of mills and pay rolls. Now in place of a single unwieldy inhabitant, the 15 miles long property has over a score of concerns. More are in prospect. Through the sweet uses of adversity, employment in one field should go up when that in another slips off. Textile tenants are encouraged by rising costs in the South and other competing areas.

The rescue party discovered that industry was on the move. It got together enough money to insure local control of the mills, dressed up its advantages as a producing center and did a canny selling job with logical prospects.

The blow fell last fall. Referee Black, representing a Federal court, conferred with a grim little band of Granite Staters in Boston. His ultimatum was $5,000,000 for defunct Amoskeag's mills—$500,000 cash in 10 days and $4,500,000 more in 30 days. As the train clattered back to Manchester the delegation covered a lot of scratch paper with tentative figures and agreed that their job was tough, but not impossible.

* * * *

Home again, they marched forth with the cry that the red-ink brigades were threatening Manchester and that the citizenry had better unlimber its check books. Slogan of the campaign was:

"Say it with subscriptions."

Canvassers ranged up and down Elm street and its environs collecting pledges. Amoskeag Industries, Inc., had been formed to peg down the purchase price when and if the $500,000 was raised. Labor went along, agreeing to work at reasonable wages for any type of new enterprises that could be induced to take space. Bishop Peterson, of the Roman Catholic Church, threw all his influence into the fight. Retailers, professional men, bankers, utility interests, manufacturers, the city government, trade organizations put on every ounce of pressure. They asked the stark question:

"Which would you rather have—pay rolls or a tragic relief problem?"

The initial $500,000 was corraled within the time set. All that remained was the $4,500,000. This sum didn't look so large when the magnitude of the mill's resources was considered.

An item of the Amoskeag property was a 16,000 kilowatt hydro-electric plant and other water power facilities along the roaring Merrimac. For some years the public service company had bought surplus juice from the old Amoskeag company. The power plant was an excellent installation.

* * * *

Walter S. Wyman, a Maine power pioneer and president of the Public Service Co. of New Hampshire, entered the picture in a large way. He agreed to buy the hydro station and other facilities for $2,500,000. Then five Manchester savings institutions stepped forward with an offer to lend Amoskeag Industries $2,750,000, taking a mortgage on mill properties. Thus, with the publicly subscribed half-million, the rescue corporation went over the $5,000,000 top with $500,000 to spare for working capital.

After a jittery period in which mysterious rivals loomed ominously, the precious deed passed safely to the strong box of Amoskeag Industries. The job of coaxing suitable industries to take space remained. For this W. Gerald Holmes, of Boston, was retained. His campaign got under way immediately with the aid of "Ned" Jewell's paper, the Union Leader; the local chamber of Commerce, the New England Council and other promotional aids.

The Amoskeag properties had power, resident labor, housing, 8,000,000 square feet of manufacturing space. Today about a third of the footage has been leased or sold.

Manchester is sure the new way of life is going to be better than the old. During the worst of the Amoskeag tragedy the city's population dropped 2,000 from its 78,000 maximum. Trouble with the old Amoskeag company was absentee ownership aggravated by refusal of executives to shift their policies with changing times. The antebellum attitude held them to staple traditional lines when the trends were obviously in other directions. It is common gossip that employes who demonstrated the possibility of rayon manufacturing on their own initiative got a profane "No" from one of the brass hats.

Fair Enough

Farewell, Swank Bistros!

WELL, THAT SETTLES THAT. Hereafter, your correspondent is going to do his pub-crawling down on the Bowery and in Chinatown, and keep away from Park avenue and the swank bistros, as Mr. O. O. McIntyre calls them. For Maj. Will Corum, the sport columnist for the Hearst papers, lies threshing on a bed of pain in St. Luke's Hospital, shot in the act of seeing a lady home from the club.

And was Will shelled in some steamy stew, where the human flotsam and jetsam of life's backwash fester in a foetid blabber, as Mr. McIntyre would say? He was not. Our Will was shooted in a soignee pied-a-terre—if one may borrow a bon mot from Mr. McIntyre—at the corner of Park avenue and Sixty-third street, hard by some of the swankiest bistros in town.

Your correspondent speaks of Mr. Corum as Our Will, even though he does work for Mr. Hearst, because he is practically everybody's Will Corum. Your correspondent has seen him sling his typewriter off a train at midnight, even in Baltimore, where the night comes down solid as rock at 7:30 in the evening, and light up the whole town with his presence, causing the roosters to crow and the milkmen to start out two hours earlier.

• • • •

THERE IS NEVER any night where our Will is, and your correspondent often has thought that some of those mobs and murder crowds which Mr. McIntyre is always seeing in New York were just Our Will surrounded by a few friends going somewhere to listen to the music.

He was the youngest major in the American Army in the war, and a combat officer at that, but it was a mistake to put a weapon in his hands, because if they had just sent him over barehanded, with a few francs, pretty soon he would have had the German high command ringing up telephone numbers and organizing a party in some smart bistro—if one may crib a phrase. Louisville, Miami, Chicago, New York, anywhere you drop our Will he is among old friends, and if such a man can be shot on Park avenue what chance has your correspondent got?

Your correspondent began to grow wary of Park avenue, that champs de chasse of the blase cognoscenti, 'way back in the days of the waiters' strike, when blows were struck and tempers ruffled in the Waldorf in an incident described as a swirl of ugly passion. Later your correspondent personally saw a swirl, the night that Johnny Weissmuller, Tarzan of the Torso did not strike a naval officer in a swank bistro, although someone else undoubtedly did. But still Park avenue seemed safe until Our Will, who came unhit through five war battles, fell wounded in the pied-a-terre.

Now, Mr. McIntyre is one of our great journalists, and your correspondent never doubts the amazing sights he sees while strolling in the night, and only wishes that he were that observant. But, though Mr. McIntyre can hardly set foot in Doyers street, but that someone hits him in the face with a fresh-killed Ming Toy, and often hears anguished cries from the high, barred windows of the Tombs, framed in the light of a cold but invariably gibbous moon, your correspondent has never had or seen any trouble down that way.

• • • •

ONE NIGHT your correspondent did stop the cab and listen for heart cries from the high-barred windows of the Tombs, framed in the light of a cold and by all means gibbous moon, but didn't hear a sound. The souls in torment weren't giving heart cries that night. And never has your correspondent waded up to the hips through fresh-killed Ming Toys in Doyers or Pell, and never has he been shanghaied for a tea clipper while drinking poisoned potions in a steaming stew amid the human flotsam and jetsam of life's backwash festering in a foetid clabber.

Invariably down the Bowery and in Doyers and in Pell things have been very quiet during your correspondent's visits, and that is where he intends to do his pub-crawling after this, leaving the swank bistros and the pieds-a-terre to the bon vivants and the blase cognoscenti.

For Park avenue is dangerous ground, and that is not hearsay, but a matter of hospital record. Our Will never would have been hurt on the Bowery, although it must be admitted that he takes it all with great sang froid, as Mr. McIntyre might say.

"I'm all right," Our Will said today. "No, it don't hurt. No, don't need a thing, except, maybe, an orchestra."

Probe of Baseball.

("Representative Cannon, of Wisconsin, has again revived the measure to probe baseball as a monopoly, contending that baseball players are enslaved and demanding justice for hard-working ball players depending for a living on their ability to sell their labor at a fair price, under decent conditions and without sacrificing a basic right of free men."—News item.)

Q.—Mr. Clook, you are a laboring man, are you not?

A.—Yes, sir; I've been a big league catcher for years.

• • • •

A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—How long have you been in servitude?

A.—Ever since the scouts saw me in South Carolina.

• • • •

Q.—Tell the committee in your own way the conditions under which you became enslaved.

A.—Well, I was a ball player in Goose Creek. I didn't like baseball, but my folks insisted that I do some kind of hard work in my spare time. So I kept at it and one day a scout came and saw me.

Q.—There, now, don't cry. Try to compose yourself. Go on.

A.—This slave trader spied on me. I didn't even know he was in the stands and I was ignorant of it until it happened.

Q.—What happened?

A.—I ain't positive. Everything went black . . . I remember hearing pistol shots . . . a blow on the head . . . a tall man and a short man . . . a long ride in the night in a red sedan . . . and then when I woke up I was a big league baseball star.

• • • •

A.—Yeah. It was orful.

Q.—Now, under what conditions did you find yourself a baseball player? Don't be ashamed. You can tell everything.

A.—I was put in a uniform and ordered to go out on the field in the hot sun day after day. Sometimes I had to work four hours a day.

Q.—Even on holidays and Sundays?

A.—Yes, sir. We even had to do double-headers with no overtime.

• • • •

Q.—Now, was there any remuneration to speak of?

A.—No, the boys were pretty healthy.

Q.—I mean was there a wage for this work?

A.—I had to take $8,000 a year to start. It was two seasons before I worked up to $14,500.

Q.—Did you have any vacation?

A.—Only six months a year!

(At this point the chairman of the committee breaks down and is taken from the room weeping hysterically. After all, we can't all have hearts of oak.)

Timid Soul.

He is so big, so hard at work;
So many larger troubles seem to lurk
About him. Would it be fair,
Seeing that I alone would gain,
To interrupt the plans he must enchain,
To ask him, and brave his stare?
Time flies on, and still I think—
Necessity compels; I do not shirk,
"After you with the salt, there!"

Outlook In Vienna

Observer Finds Austrians Still Romantic But Worried By Their Fate As Pawn In German And Italian Maneuvers.

By K. K. Kawakami.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Vienna.

VIENNA is Mittel-Europa's watchtower from which one may best observe kaleidscopic maneuvers in the game of empire being played particularly by Germany and Italy. In this game, the smaller Danubian states are struggling to restrain the ambitions of their big brothers. Germany is far from having abandoned he hope of Anschluss, though for the moment her strategy has met with a setback. Italy professes to be solicitous of Austria's independence, but the independence she tolerates is one under her protection. Thus sandwiched between the two giants, little Austria leads a precarious existence.

England and France regard an independent Austria as essential to the peace of Europe and to her best interests, and the Austrians welcome British and French re-armament as a possible restraining influence upon their aggressive neighbors. But England seems resolved, for the present at least, that her arms never be used on the banks of the Danube.

I find the Viennese as gentle, music-loving, cafe-minded as ever, mightily proud that they never failed to subsidize the opera even in the years of greatest depression. They talk about Wagner and "Tannhauser" rather than discuss the portents of war and the troubles which beset them on all sides. There is a pathetic touch of fatalism in this, their lassitude. They know that they are not their own masters, but pawns in international politics played by their neighbors, whose masks of friendship ill conceal their sinister designs. They maintain their independence only on the sufferance of their pseudo-protectors.

Socialist Slaughter Seen Directed By Duce.

THE WORLD still remembers the lurid incident of February, 1934, in which the Viennese Socialists were murdered by Chancellor Dollfuss and his Heimwehr troops. The Karl Marx Hof and the Goethe Hof, the world's best apartment houses for workers, were the chief targets of the rifle and gun shots of the government soldiers. Why this consanguinary warfare? Largely because Dollfuss had to respect Mussolini's desire, if not his command.

Before that tragic incident the municipality of Vienna had been under a Socialist administration. It had adopted many measures for social justice. It promoted the welfare of the working population by imposing heavy taxation upon industrialists and the leisure class in general. Dollfuss was not a Socialist; rather, he represented the vested interests, which hated the Socialist experimentation.

Yet the Little Chancellor might not have dared enact the anti-Socialist tragedy if he had not been told by Rome, implicitly if not explicitly, to liquidate the Socialist domination of the Vienna city government. Fascist Italy disliked the Viennese Socialists not merely for ideological reasons. It hated them because they exposed the smuggling of Italian arms into Hungary to aid Fascist elements there. It was significant that in January, 1934, Signor Suvitch, undersecretary of foreign affairs of the Rome government, took a hurried trip to Vienna, and spent many hours with Dollfuss behind closed doors. Only a few weeks later Dollfuss embarked on his murderous action.

Uprising Of Nazis Resulted From Tragedy.

WHAT FOLLOWED was equally tragic. Germany was not to watch with folded arms Italy's steady advance in Austria. By cajolery and intimidation, by expending enormous sums for propaganda, by the use of the powerful radio station at Munich for inciting the Austrian Nazis, Germany strove to bring Austria under her protection. The upshot of it all was the cold-blooded murder of Dollfuss himself in the uprising of the Nazis in Vienna. That was in July, 1934, only six months after Dollfuss had slaughtered the Socialists. It was significant that at the very moment Dollfuss was killed his wife was Mussolini's house guest in the Duce's villa at Riccione, not far from Venice. Dollfuss himself had been planning to visit Rome, presumably to enter into some sort of understanding with Mussolini, and the Nazis were determined to prevent that deal even if they had to take the chancellor's life.

The man who succeeded Dollfuss is Dr. Kurt von Schuschnigg, minister of justice in the cabinet of the "martyred" chancellor. A son of an Austrian general, Schuschnigg joined the army during the World War when he was 19, seeing action against the Italians in the Tyrol. The story has been circulated in a widely read American book on Europe that Schuschnigg was captured by the Italians and held in an Italian concentration camp until the end of the war. When I was received by the new chancellor the other day I asked him whether the story was true. He was both surprised and amused. "This is the first time," he said, "that I knew I had ever been a prisoner."

Schuschnigg looks little like a dictator. He is tall and handsome. He is shy, modest, undramatic. He looks mostly like a professor. And, indeed, his ambition in his younger days was to become a professor of law. Yet he is a full-fledged dictator, a creature of circumstances rather than of his own will.

Parliament And Polls Closed By Schusschnig.

UNDER THE Schuschnigg regime Parliament has been suspended and elections suppressed. The chancellor administers his government without bothering to consult any representative organization. This he thinks unavoidable in order to forestall domination by the Nazis.

Austria's ruling class today consists of industrialists and capitalists, a large number of whom are Jews; the Catholic clergy, who exercise a great political influence, and the bourgeoisie. Powerful as this combination is, it is not numerically superior.

On the other side are workers, farmers, peasants, jobless young men and women—dissatisfied, restless elements which are economically and financially inferior, but numerically superior. And it is among these elements that the Nazis count a majority, eagerly looking for political change, still dreaming of Anschluss with Germany. These unemployed elements believe that Hitler provided their fellows in Germany with jobs and made them contented and happy, and they think that the extention of Nazism into Austria is their only salvation. That explains why Schuschnigg dares not hold elections.

Hoping to combat the Nazi restlessness resulting from unemployment, the government has launched a relief plan calling for a large bond issue. At this writing, public response to the bond flotation has been far from reassuring. That is where Jewish influence comes in. Unless the government appeals to Jewish financiers and wins their support it will be difficult to obtain the necessary fund. Of course, the non-Jewish elements of the ruling class relish no thought of the Jews becoming preponderantly influential. Yet they see no alternative, for they are not themselves financially strong. And the Jews, hating the Nazis like poison, are willing to co-operate with the Schuschnigg government, though they would naturally demand a quid pro quo.

Pride Of Austrians Reported Still High.

AUSTRIA, shorn of her former territories, poor, depressed, born between rival giants, is still proud as Lucifer, cherishing the memory of her vanished grandeur, hoping against hope that somehow happy days may yet return to her. She thinks—that is, her ruling class thinks—a monarchial regime best suited to her and hopes that a Hapsburg may yet be brought back to grace the throne deserted since the World War. That, however, seems a forlorn hope, for a Hapsburg restoration may precipitate international complications the repercussions of which might prove disastrous.

New Raskob Deals Ignored by U. S.

New York, May 14 (AP).—Pierre S. du Pont's 1931 stock transactions with Mrs. John J. Raskob were ruled out of the 1919 income tax case against Du Pont and Raskob today, curtailing the Government's effort to prove the two multi-millionaires made fictitious cross-sales of stock after the Wall Street panic to reduce their income tax payments.

Richard L. Disney, of the United States Board of Tax Appeals, barred the Du Pont-Mrs. Raskob transactions from the record and remarked to Mason B. Fleming, the chief of Government counsel:

The Empire And World Trade.

IN THE YEAR 1931 the United Kingdom sold to other lands within the British Empire goods to the value of £170,673,000. That same year it bought from those countries products valued at £247,417,000.

The next year saw the negotiation of the Ottawa agreements. Thus, there came into being a comprehensive system of imperial preference intended to bind the members of the British Commonwealth of Nations closer together economically and benefit each of them individually.

For Great Britain itself these trade treaties marked a further step away from the free trade system to which it had clung so tenaciously over a period of many decades. Determined to give increased protection to its industries and its agriculture, it was prepared, in return for concessions by the dominions, to give preference to certain products of the other partners in the commonwealth.

• • • •

WHAT HAS HAPPENED to British foreign trade since then? By 1936 British exports to the rest of the empire (including the dominions) had jumped in value to £216,927,000; concurrently, imports from the empire had risen to £332,580,000.

To the man in the street the conclusion to be drawn from these figures is unmistakable: The Ottawa agreements have been a striking success. The corollary is also clear. These agreements should be renewed.

But this is by no means the universal view either in Great Britain or the dominions. Careful students of Britain's foreign trade situation are, indeed, convinced that the general effect of the Ottawa treaties has not been good, but bad; that their continuation, certainly in their present form, would injure rather than benefit the United Kingdom. And while many of them are reconciled to the continuation of bilateral trade agreements between Great Britain and each of the dominions, they are persuaded that the present system of preferences must drastically be modified if real injury is not to be done to Great Britain, the empire, and the world.

• • • •

THESE STUDENTS do not doubt the validity of the figures cited above. They accept them as entirely accurate. But they point out that these figures do not tell the whole story. There are other figures which can be cited which tend to throw cold water on the jubilation aroused over the unquestioned expansion of interimperial trade in the period since 1931 and particularly since the conclusion of the Ottawa agreements.

Britain's total trade with the empire rose just short of 60 per cent. Her trade with the dominions alone (excluding the Irish Free State and India) rose over 67 per cent. But during this same period of 1931-1936, the general foreign trade picture was, so far as Britain is concerned, by no means as encouraging.

Eyports to all countries, imperial and foreign combined, increased to be sure from £390,622,000 in 1932 to £440,719,000 in 1936 and imports declined in that same period from £861,253,000 to £848,936,000.

But the increase in total foreign trade was, as these figures show, very much less than the increase in the trade with the empire countries. Exports to foreign countries just about stood still while imports from such sources declined.

In other words, what happened to British foreign trade during the years following 1931 was, first, a moderate expansion of foreign trade, paralleling a world movement in the same direction as the depression lifted, as currency chaos came to an end and as the price level rose. Secondly, there was an internal shift in the direction of Britain's external trade. This shift was from foreign customers and sources of supply to imperial customers and sources. In a real sense, therefore, it was a case of robbing Peter to pay Paul.

• • • •

SENTIMENTALISTS in Great Britain and the empire who believe that the maintenance and strengthening of existing imperial bonds are worth any price will argue that the drift toward imperial autarchy revealed by the above figures is an excellent development. But to hard-headed dominion governments, concerned with the welfare of their own people first, this argument does not hold water.

It has already been repudiated, in part, by the Dominion of Canada which, to be sure, is interested in increasing its exports to Great Britain and is prepared, therefore, to make reciprocal concessions to British trade. But Canada is at least equally interested in pushing its trade with the United States.

It is significant that the recently concluded Anglo-Canadian treaty, replacing the Ottawa agreement reached by the two countries in 1932, follows a somewhat different line than did its predecessor. As pointed out by the London Economist, the Canadian government in this latest agreement made a "definite move away from guarantees of minimum margins of preference (which prevent the reduction of tariffs on foreign goods) toward guarantees of maximum preferential rates of duty, which leaves the path open to a more liberal regime of the future."

"If this," the Economist goes on to say, "is to be a feature of the revised agreements with the other dominions, it will be a distinct, though passive, contribution toward freer trade."

• • • •

WHETHER IT WILL be or not, the outcome of the Imperial Conference which opened at London yesterday will show. But one thing that is already clear is that not only Canada but certain of the other dominions as well are beginning to wonder whether imperial preference is a game wholly worth the candle.

They would, no doubt, like to see existing preferences continued, so far as their own products are concerned. But they also yearn for an expansion of trade with the outside world. And in Great Britain, too, despite the protectionist ardor of the present government, there are those who wonder what benefits the British people really derive by crippling their trade with foreign nations to make possible just that much added trade with the dominions.

British foreign trade as a whole, they point out, has very definitely lagged behind internal recovery and constitutes today one of the dark spots on Britain's economic picture.

There is, to be sure, no likelihood of any immediate and drastic reversal of the protectionist trend which set in with the formation of the national government in 1931. There is even reason to believe that Mr. Baldwin and his prospective successor as prime minister, Mr. Neville Chamberlain, will urge the continuance of the present preferential system in interimperial trade. But the unanswered question is whether the agreements that are to replace those made at Ottawa in 1932 will look toward imperial autarchy or to freer world trade.

• • • •

As the Economist points out:

Even within the framework of the existing system, it would be possible for the (British) government, in collaboration with the dominions, India and the colonies, to set its face against a number of dangerous aspects of its previous policy; against the closed door in the dependent empire, which is compatible neither with economic sanity, nor with imperial trusteeship, nor with international appeasement; against quota restrictions, which penalize the poor consumer and the progressive producer, while encouraging stagnation and inefficiency; against such pledges to the rest of the empire as inhibit the granting of freer trade to foreign goods; against a pedantic and obstructionist insistence upon the most favored nation principles in cases where its own purpose—freer international trade—would be better served by the establishment of low-tariff groups open to all . . . Many countries, notably the United States, France, and the Oslo powers, have given practical evidence of their anxiety to contribute toward freer conditions of world trade. The time is ripe for a bold gesture by the British Commonwealth of Nations toward the same end.

It can be taken for granted that such a bold gesture would be greeted with enthusiasm in Washington. For in making possible a constructive Anglo-American reciprocal agreement it would place the capstone on Secretary Hull's admirable efforts to break the log jam of world trade. It is up to Great Britain to say in what direction it now proposes to move. And its decision will be a momentous one.

United States Aluminum Suit Is Blocked by Federal Court

Cummings' Motion Denied in Government Anti-Trust Action; Department of Justice Officials 'Stunned;' Appeal May Be Made.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, May 14. — Federal Judge R. M. Gibson issued a temporary injunction today blocking the Government's antitrust suit against the Aluminum Co. of America.

Judge Gibson's order restrained Attorney General Homer S. Cummings from continuing the suit filed against the Aluminum Co. in the southern district of New York.

The Aluminum Co. contended the case was identical with one brought against it in 1912, and settled by a consent decree in Federal court here.

In Washington, officials of the Department of Justice expressed surprise over the court's order. A spokesman said:

"We are stunned by Judge Gibson's action, but cannot say what we will do until we have had an opportunity to study the decision." He indicated the order might be appealed to the Third Circuit Court of Appeals.

Judge Gibson, in his order, said: "The United States of America is without legal or equitable right further to proceed against the Aluminum Co. of America and its wholly-owned subsidiary companies or former officers and directors * * *."

The decision denied a motion on behalf of Attorney General Cummings to dismiss a petition of the Aluminum Co. against prosecution of the antitrust action in New York State.

Rail Walkout Threat Averted, Board Reports

Federal Ruling Aids Compromise, Group Tells Roosevelt.

Danger of a strike on nine Eastern railroads which flared suddenly last month, has been averted, President Roosevelt was informed yesterday by an emergency board he appointed on April 26 to seek a settlement of the dispute.

Frank M. Swecker, William H. Davis and I. L. Sharfman, members of the board wired the President they were "pleased to report that the threatened interruption of commerce in the New York harbor area has now been averted through the established procedures of their own organizations and the orderly processes of the railway labor act, certain differences in wage rates provocative of controversy having been removed by agreement."

Background Details.

The strike was actually ordered by the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employes, as a result of a jurisdictional dispute with the International Longshoremen's Association.

President Roosevelt promptly appointed the emergency board under provisions of the railway labor act, and the strike was held up. The law gives such an emergency board up to 30 days in which to report, and provides that no strike shall be started within 30 days after the report is made.

"The adjustment agreed upon by the parties involves no compromise with principle," the board reported to the President, "and on the contrary reflects a commendable recognition by all concerned of the desirability of proceeding in orderly fashion and of the adequacy of the railway labor act for this purpose." The board added its full report would be submitted later.

Roads Involved.

Railroads which were threatened by the strike included the Pennsylvania, Long Island, Baltimore & Ohio, Reading, Central Railroad of New Jersey, Lehigh Valley, New York Central, New York, New Haven & Hartford, Delaware, Lackawanna & Western and Erie.

Some 25,000 employes were involved.

The President meanwhile received a report from another emergency board named to settle a dispute that threatened a strike on the Southern Pacific system.

The board, composed of G. Stanleigh Arnold, Charles Kerr and Dexter M. Keezer, said in its findings:

"The controversies on which we have made findings and recommendations in this report arise primarily from failure to observe carefully the explicit provisions and the spirit of the railway labor act.

Law Would Aid.

"Strict observance of the act would reduce the array of controversies we have reviewed to trivial proportions. We earnestly commend the parties in conflict to such observance."

The strike was voted by members of two brotherhoods, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen. The disputes, however, involved members of two other rail unions, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and the Order of Railway Conductors, interorganization controversies over jurisdiction being at the bottom of the entire strike threat. A large majority of the 50,000 employes casting ballots voted to strike.

53 Jews Injured In Polish Riots; Crisis Is Feared

Policeman's Fatal Stabbing Causes Outbreak; Nation Guards Against Pogrom.

By the Associated Press.

Warsaw, May 14.—Police took special precautions throughout Poland tonight to prevent a nation-wide outburst of anti-Semitic violence following yesterday's wild rioting at Brzesc—the wartime Brest-Litovsk.

Authorities expressed fear the critical moment would come tomorrow on the occasion of the burial of a policeman whose stabbing by a Jew precipitated the Brzesc disorders in which Jewish-owned stores were wrecked and plundered.

Latest accounts said 53 Jews were injured, three of them critically. Property damage was put unofficially at $500,000.

The attackers destroyed and stole much of the contents of Jewish shops they demolished. Police recovered much of the loot, some of which had been distributed to needy families.

"Revenge" Is Demanded.

Officials expressed hope that if widespread violence could be prevented tomorrow, anti-Semitic passion would subside.

A National Radical Party manifesto was circulated throughout the country despite a government prohibition, demanding "revenge" on the Jews.

Jews at Brzesc barricaded themselves in their homes and would not even venture to talk by telephone.

Half the 60,000 inhabitants of Brzesc are Jews. Although it has been destroyed in war three times since its founding in the eleventh century, the city is known for peace. It was there the separate peace treaty between Russia and the Central Powers was negotiated in 1918.

All Poland's principal political parties except the illegal Communist Party have condoned or advocated anti-Semitism in one form or another.

The National Democrats and the National Radicals are strongly anti-Jewish; the Peasant Party urges mass emigration of Jews; the Socialists, who previously condemned anti-Semitism, announced this spring they wanted to observe May Day apart from the Jewish Socialists.

Premier Approves Boycott.

The Government Party itself has shown traces of economic anti-Semitism since Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, virtual dictator of Poland, died two years ago Wednesday.

Premier Felicyan Slawog Skladkowski, addressing the Seym (Parliament) last year, condemned acts of violence against Jews, but added: "The economic boycott—all right."

Col. Adam Koc—first lieutenant to Pilsudski's successor as "strong man," Gen. Edward Rydz-Smigly—declared last February, in announcing a program to unite all full-blooded Poles:

"We can in no case approve of acts of violence and brutal anti-Semitic reactions * * * but we understand the instinct of legitimate self-defense of our culture and the strivings of our people toward economic independence."

Polish Jewry has been still further disturbed by the assertions of Col. Jan Kowalewski, an assistant of Col. Koc, that Poland has an "excessive number of Hebrews," that "we cannot wait until emigration eliminates the problem" and that the main branches of economic life must become "Polish."

Japan Builds Wide Defense Against World

Health Program's Aim Is for Stronger Fighting Men.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, May 14.—The government today intensified Japan's war preparations by creation of a planning board to control and mobilize industry for defense activities, establish a public health law to produce hardier soldiers and change the election laws to curb the power of political parties that oppose army domination.

The cabinet, headed by Gen. Senjuro Hayashi, sought by this step to place the economic life of the empire under an emergency regime similar to wartime rule.

It revived opposition clamor for overthrow of the Hayashi government.

The planning board is headed by Toyotaro Yuki, minister of finance, and includes cabinet members and other high officials. Emperor Hirohito approved its establishment.

Grave Emergency.

Premier Hayashi told its members its formation was due to "the gravity of the national emergency and the recognized need for increasing the national power as quickly as possible."

Pointing out that the Hayashi government was recently repudiated at the polls, the opposition parties, Minseito and Seiyukai, charged the board was nothing more than a means for Hayashi to exercise a veiled dictatorship. They agreed to co-operate in trying to oust his government.

Real Test Ahead.

The opposition also complained the board was established without approval of the Diet (Parliament), in which the Minseito and Seiyukai captured an overwhelming majority April 30 in the election.

The real test of the new planning board will come in the August session of the Diet, when the government seeks funds to carry out the board's program.

Refusal of the Diet to grant funds, according to leaders of the opposition, would mean not only the death of the planning board but the end of the Hayashi government.

Auto Horn Blare, Loud Radio Listed As Jitters Causes

Richmond, Va., May 14 (AP).—Many modern children will grow up to be irritable and jittery men and women, a Richmond psychiatrist said today, because of unnecessary and raucous noises.

Dr. Harvie DeJ. Coghill, director of the Children's Memorial Clinic, listed loud radios and blaring automobile horns as illustrations of the kind of noises prompting his statement.

Of the two, however, Dr. Coghill thinks the effect of radios loudly and incessantly played is worse on the delicate nervous system of sensitive citizens.

"The clamor of loud radios and the raucous noises of horns act like a sledge hammer on the nervous system of the hearers," he said.

The psychiatrist said that "little fellows—those with profound feelings of inadequacy—feel bigger the more noise they make. Think of the really big people who have achieved success. They are invariably quiet, never blatant."

Alaska Flood Recedes.

Fairbanks, Alaska, May 14 (AP).—The mercury dropped 5 degrees below freezing today, causing the flood waters which had inundated half the city to drop six inches. Ice jams which followed spring breakups on the frozen Chena and Tanana rivers sent the flood waters into the city yesterday.

Hiking Club to Travel Harpers Ferry, Vicinity

The Wanderbirds Hiking Club will visit Harpers Ferry tomorrow via the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. On arrival hikers will cross the Shenandoah River and begin a climb past Chimney Rock to the heights, and then along the Appalachian Trail. After a campfire lunch they will continue down the old Government road to Harpers Ferry.

They will meet at Union Station at 8:15 a. m. tomorrow. The leaders are Howard Ball, ornitholigist, and Dr. Buschek. The Baltimore Hiwing Club has been invited to join as well as the general public.

70 Children to Join in Community Fete

Seventy children will participate in the dances and acrobatic features of a program to be given at 8 p. m. today in Powell Junior High School Auditorium, sponsored by the Columbia Heights Community Center of the Community Center Department.

The dances will be given by groups of children in the classes of Bancroft and Cooke schools, under the direction of Miss Marjorie Mitchell, and will include tap, musical comedy, novelty and Gypsy dances, and the Boys Club of Columbia Heights Center will be seen in a variety of tumbling acts directed by H. K. Clayton and J. N. Colangelo.

Twain's Story Made Into Fine Film at Earle

'Prince and Pauper' Heads Excellent Bill at the Thirteenth St. House.

"THE PRINCE AND THE PAUPER." First National picturization of the story by Mark Twain, featuring Errol Flynn and the Mauch Twins, Billy and Bobby, with Henry Stephenson, Barton MacLane, Eric Portman, Alan Hale, Lionel Pape, Murray Kinnell, Montagu Love, Phyllis Barry, Ivan MacLaren, Claude Rains, Halliwell Hobbes, Ivan Simpson, Fritz Leiber, Robert Warwick, Lionel Braham and Lionel Belmore. Directed by William Keighley. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris.

Memorable as a dual coup in both picture-making and release-timing is "The Prince and the Pauper."

The timeless royal cavalcade of Great Britain, now engrossing the world, finds shining expression in the picture. Add to this the peculiarly American genius of Mark Twain's story, those inspired small boys, Billy and Bobby Mauch, and the touch-and-go gallantry of Errol Flynn—and as Twain might have said, you not only have sump'n' but a-plenty.

All of Mark Twain's golden stories have a bitter core of social consciousness and "The Prince and the Pauper," even as sweetened by Hollywood, is no exception.

Its England is the England of the Tudors, but in its contrast of grimy slums and jeweled splendor, it is also the England of the Windsors.

The small prince-pauper ruler of Britannia, struggling against the more obvious phases of oppression, is somehow reminiscent of another recent ruler, no longer a ruler. Yes, no mistake, "The Prince and the Pauper" is the coupiest of coups in the way it stresses the glories and the muddied foundations of British Empire.

Twins Rank High.

Billy and Bobby Mauch are the answer to a screen director's dream as the Prince of Wales and the beggar boy who change places for fun and can't get changed back. These handsome little tykes not only play their parts ably but with a devil-may-careish spirit that would have endeared them to the great Mark Twain. Somehow, they have escaped even a touch of that deplorable infection, the child-actorish disease. They are just small and delightfully rascally boys. The scene where they crack nuts with the Great Seal of England is just too good.

Though the picture is Billy's and Bobby's own, they have great support. Erroll Flynn, one of the greatest stars in his own right, is not dimmed, but adds luster to a fine picture as a roving money fighter (the romantic name for it is soldier of fortune). Anyway, Errol wins the right to sit in his sovereign's presence and a knighthood even though he is interrupted in his amours with a lovely bar wench played by Phyllis Barry.

This is the only touch of the tender passion in the picture, and is not so tender at that. But many picture-goers will find a great story, denuded of billing and cooing, a positive boon.

Excellent Support.

Claude Rains and Montagu Love contribute splendid playing. The astute Mr. Rains plays his role down a bit, if anything, thus making it more effective. His Lord Protector of the Realm is a poisonous but suave creature who might sit on any board of directors and vote to pass dividends.

Montagu Love has the tremendous memories of Charles Laughton and Emil Jannings to contend with in his creation of Henry the Eighth. But he contrives an excellent and essentially majectis interpretation of this worst of the villainous Tudor tribe. This brings us to the weakest point of the picture. Quite a few folks are not going to be able to reconcile the idea of a Prince of Wales who loves and respects his father with the idea that that same father was Henry the Eighth who sent the boy's mother to the block. But the terrific power and determination of the old monarch, as portrayed by Love, bridges this gap in fair fashion.

The coronation scenes are tremendously handsome and impressive, even to those who think of Britain's big show as just that.

Yesterday's audience had a holdover treat in the continued presence of Shep Fields and his orchestra, whose all-accordion interpretation of "The Flight of the Bumble Bee" is one of the most novel and brilliant orchestra offerings of the year.

Hal Kemp and his music makers, a little delayed, will be on hand today and for the rest of the week.

Belasco.

"AMPHITRYON." L'Alliance cinematographique European picturisation of a screen play by Reinhold Schunzel, with Henri Garat, Armand Bernard, Jeanne Boitel, Odette Florelle and Marguerite Moreno. Directed by the author. Reviewed at the Belasco Theater Friday night by Sally Stroud.

If you remember your Greek mythology, "Amphitryon" will delight you. Even if your education did not include learned dissertations about the "Gods at Play," you will still find it hilarious satire.

Jupiter, head man of Olympus, is a charming philanderer who woos the ladies in devious manners. As the supreme being, he naturally can assume more fascinating forms than any mortal man could hope to simulate. Thus Alemene, wife of the Thebian general, Amphitryon, finds his pretending as her absent-at-the-wars husband both irresistible and fine-flavored.

Heady wine and flattering women prove almost too much for Jupe; Alcmene's reputation is just before being shredded when home comes the real husband. Jupiter is taxed for an explanation; but smoothly extricates himself. Juno, who is Mrs. Jupiter, appears to add the final touch to the subjugation of the erring god.

There are a number of things which could be said about "Amphitryon" . . . it is deftly bawdy, done with a light and sure sense of satire and played with a tongue-in-the-cheek adroitness which will appeal to the sophisticated moviegoer.

"Cafe Metropole" Offers Lively Fun With Stellar Players in Leading Roles

Capitol Screen Feature Is Supported by Excellent Vaudeville Bill.

"CAFE METROPOLE." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of an original story by Gregory Ratoff, adapted to the screen by Jacques Deval, cofeaturing Loretta Young, Tyrone Power and Adolphe Menjou, with Gregory Ratoff, Christian Rub, Charles Winninger, Helen Westley and Georges Renavent. Directed by E. H. Griffith. Previewed Tuesday, May 11, at Loew's Capitol Theater.

There is much the same sort of effervescent humor and spontaneous gayety in this subject as characterized the development in "The King and the Chorus Girl." It is frivolous, innocuous and gay. Most of the action takes place in an elaborate night club in Paris, where a rich American brings his daughter to enjoy her favorite caviar, his sister to partake of her favorite viands and himself to indulge in the luxury of wild strawberries, out of season.

BELL.

It happens that this same establishment, only a few nights before, has housed another young American who has gone heavily in debt to the place over the gambling tables. To discharge this obligation, he is made to impersonate a youthful Russian noble with a view to winning the favor of the American heiress. A few complications arise, needless to say, when it is discovered that he has assumed the rightful name of a real Russian nobleman, working in the cafe as a waiter. You can imagine what happens probably better than it could be told here.

Frivolous Complications.

The thin disguise of the masquerading American "Princeton boy" is quickly penetrated by the handsome young woman who becomes genuinely in love with him. The father is let in for all manner of annoyances and the real nobleman finally comes out on top, by virtue of a happy combination of circumstances. The manager of the "Cafe Metropole," in the meantime, is undergoing all sorts of difficulties in trying to get his books balanced against the coming of the auditors and the collecting from the young man who has guaranteed to make good his gaming table debt.

This young man is played with consummate skill by Tyrone Power, steadily improving as an actor, and the girl is done with equal skill and a great deal more beauty by Loretta Young. Miss Young has achieved a poise and a savoir faire, in a manner of speaking, that stamp her as one of the most engaging of the cinema's younger stars.

In the more elderly and ostensibly more sedate roles—although they are hardly that—we find that commendable character actor, Charles Winninger, Helen Westley and Adolphe Menjou. Mr. Menjou does an especially effective job as the manager of the Metropole, Victor, and Mr. Winninger and Miss Westley, one of the mainstays of the New York Theater Guild, appear to great advantage as the father and aunt of the young lady from the States who knows her own mind.

Ratoff in Fine Fettle.

And now we come to Gregory Ratoff, who wrote the story upon which the film play is so humorously based. Mr. Ratoff has written himself a rather "fat" part as the Russian noble fallen on evil days, who finally manages to cash in on his discomfiture. We already have said something in a daily column about the versatility of this able actor who seems competent to discharge any task assigned him. I can think of no two characterizations farther apart that his Papa Boule in "Seventh Heaven" and his regal menial in "Cafe Metropole."

There are, of course, numerous others in the cast who add to the whimsical charm of a picture that doesn't mean a thing beyond an hour or so of genial entertainment. Foremost among these must be mentioned, that distinguished, but usually ignored, character actor, Christian Rub, who has a funny name and an equally funny way about him when it comes to the delineation of quaint figures in the play. Mr. Rub is quite an actor.

Sybil Bowan Stars.

On the stage at the Capitol this week the goings-on are largely dominated by that priceless pair of zanies, Collins and Peterson. They "master ceremonies" in a manner of speaking, if not themselves, and Collins still plays a very mean trumpet solo of "When Day Is Done." Their appearances are many and their reception yesterday afternoon must have been gratifying to two such veteran showmen.

The bill is headlined by Sybil Bowan, that inimitable young impersonator, who looks more like Gloria Swanson than Gloria does herself and who concludes her act with that memorable caricature of the First Lady of the Land, addressing a meeting of the Girl Scouts. Others who center audience interest are the Three Arleys, gymnasts and pole balancers of the first rank, and Helene Denizon and the 12 American Rockets, a dance ensemble that executes many difficult feats, many of them bordering closely upon the adagio.

The Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's more-lively-than-usual overture complete a bill that is sprightly throughout its length—which is pretty long.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, May 14.—I read in a magazine last night that more safety deposit boxes are rented per capita in Hollywood than in any other city. I forgot the exact total, but I had to laugh when I read the article. If the hard-working statistician who compiled the information only knew to what use the vaults are put, I am sure he would think his labors futile indeed.

MYRNA LOY.

* * * *

The majority of stars employ business managers to guide their financial affairs. Some do not even handle their own pay checks. Mae West, for example, only requests a peek at the numerals before her manager deposits it. Dozens of stars live on allowances doled out by their business advisers. Darn few ever see the stocks and bonds and annuities these advisers purchase, for the valuable papers are stored in the managers' offices.

* * * *

That leaves little for the stars to hide in their own safety deposit vaults. Jewels, perhaps, and maybe some ready cash. But for the most part, the actor's boxes contain memoirs. Myrna Loy keeps in her vault the blonde wig she wore in her first picture. Janet Gaynor keeps the shoes she wore in "Seventh Heaven." Carole Lombard has an uncashed check for $2, her first earnings as an extra. I could not begin to count the old theater programs, sheet music, early photographs, press clippings and other such souvenirs that repose in stars' deposit boxes.

Nor do I know of a more amusing keepsake than Charlie Butterworth's deed to a lot he bought "sight unseen." The property is ten feet under water, and Charlie has saved the deed as a "reminder."

* * * *

Here is an anecdote about Gary Cooper that will add to your already good opinion of him (I take it for granted you have a good opinion of Coop; most people do have). At any rate, a workman on Gary's set wore a coat of such noisy hue that he was kidded severely. The fellow took it with extremely good face. But Cooper overheard him tell another chap that he was sensitive about the coat because he had been out of work and had had doctor bills to pay for his wife, and this was the only coat he owned.

* * * *

That afternoon, Gary called his tailor, and next morning two rush orders arrived—an even louder coat for Cooper, who immediately became the recipient of all the kidding, and a new suit for the laborer.

A novel Sunday school class is about to come into existence in Hollywood. I learned of it when I was visiting Shirley Temple's set, and it occurred to me to ask Mrs. Temple if her child attends church. She blushed a bit as she hesitatingly admitted that Shirley went only once. Then she explained:

"That was enough! I learned that a famous child doesn't belong in a regular class. The other children forgot what they had come for, and spent their time looking at Shirley and trying to talk to her. I do want her to go to Sunday school, and now I think she may. You see, other movie mothers have had the same experience, and we are getting together to form a special class for children in pictures."

"A STAR IS BORN." Selznick International's picturization of a story by Robert Carson and William Wellman, adapted to the screen by Dorothy Parker, Alan Campbell and Robert Carson, starring Janet Gaynor and Fredric March, supported by Adolphe Menjou, May Robson, Peggy Wood, Andy Devine, Lionel Stander and Edgar Kennedy. Directed by William Wellman.

Janet Gaynor and Fredric March are seen at the best they ever have been on the screen in this subject, executed entirely in the comparatively new three-tone Technicolor process of natural color photography. There are flaws in the chromatic treatment of the film, but precious few in the expertness with which it is acted.

"A Star Is Born," frankly, is a tragic story. It ends on no happy note, but on one which, nevertheless, is logical and exceedingly moving. Analogies might be drawn between the theme of the story and certain recent actual events in Hollywood, but they would be futile and only create heartaches.

A star falls and one rises in this picture. It is from that opposition of viewpoints that the drama derives its strength. And it has strength. It is a vigorous, impressive and intensely pathetic recital of what can happen to a girl who seeks fame in the film colony.

Not alone are Miss Gaynor and Mr. March responsible for its tremendous tug at the heartstrings. Something is done also in this direction by that splendid veteran actress, May Robson, as grandmother of the wisp of a child who seeks fame before the cameras. Something also is done by Adolphe Menjou, fine actor that he is, in the role of a producer whose views are slightly warped from time to time by the commercial demands of the business in which he finds himself.

Altogether, "A Star Is Born" is a fine example of the cinema's recent emancipation from the serious imposts of an earlier era that demanded a "happy ending." It has the courage of its convictions and the fortitude to pursue its course to a bitter but conclusive and satisfying climax.

Metropolitan

"SILENT BARRIERS." Gaumont-British picturization of a story, "The Great Divide" by Alan Sullivan, adapted to the screen by Michael Barringer and Milton Roemer, featuring Richard Arlen, supported by Roy Emerton, J. Farrell MacDonald, Barry Mackay, Lilli Palmer and Antoinette Cellier. Directed by Milton Roemer. Reviewed Friday evening by Dorothea Lewis.

Mountains and rapids, rivers and muskeg marshes are here the heroes and villains of a picture that can't live up to them.

"Silent Barriers" is an attempt to picture the elemental struggle of man to build the Canadian Pacific through the magnificent Canadian Rockies. It is something of a compliment that it even succeeds in suggesting that struggle. But it lacks the color, the tang, the lustiness of its time—in fact, it never seems to belong in any period but today.

G-B Pictures are wise in letting nature have a great deal of the footage and nature just upstages the little humans right out of camera range. It is not too cluttered up with plot, though, of course, there is the no-good, who goes to work, and the weakling who grows strong.

Set in Moodyville, the center of the railroad building operations, a pioneer and labor town, the real story is the fight to build the line through brutally rugged land. Most of the dramatic effects are achieved during a desperate expedition into the mountains, seeking a pass between the jagged cliffs, while the impatient, starved, unpaid laborers riot in Moodyville.

From the moment that the volunteers start their trek into the mountains, the story picks up a certain amount of punch and excitement. The men and women complications are completely unimportant.

Two new (to us) young ladies play attractively; the brunette Miss Celler as the good girl, and the blonde Miss Palmer as the bad. J. Farrell MacDonald adds his capable bit.

RKO-Keith's

It has become habitual for Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers to run on forever in whatever vehicle they may choose to select. In this case, it happens to be "Shall We Dance," not their best, but still good enough to warrant the continuation of its run on the screen at RKO-Keith's.

There might be a little more of the Astaire tapping in this subject and perhaps just a dash or so more of Miss Rogers, but as it is, it is pretty swell entertainment. With more story than the stellar films for this pair are accustomed to have, "Shall We Dance" strikes a happy note, even if you do miss the "hoofing."

Then there is that immensely amusing scene in which Eric Blore, best of the screen's "gentleman's gentlemen," who creates panics of laughter in a solo interlude that is worth the price of admission.

There are others, of course, who go to make up the sum total of the play's screen appeal, notable among them Edward Everett Horton, who has much the same sort of part he played in "The King and the Chorus Girl," with Fernand Gravet and Joan Blondell.

The Pathe News and abbreviated sound subjects complete a program which, by this time, needs no further encomiums.

Columbia

After registering their customary box-office appeal in no uncertain terms at the Capitol, Robert Taylor and Jean Harlow, in "Personal Property," move a couple of blocks down F street to repeat their success.

Robert is a London play-boy, very much on the loose, and Jean, a gal from Kansas, very much on the make. Robert is on the verge of becoming a remittance man and Jean on the edge of marrying an unpleasant bounder, because, after all, a girl must have bread and butter and caviare.

At this point Robert enters Jean's life, first as a would-be pick-up, then as a bailiff and then as a butler. His efforts to ingratiate himself with Jean as a male flirt and a bailiff are plenty of a flop, but as a butler—ah, that's something else again. He spills soup over guests, puts pepper in the cocktails and slings mayonnaise everywhere except in the salad—but he makes time with his lovely boss.

Net result is a wedding in which the butler is the pinch-hit groom.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, May 14.

MET. MUSEUM OF ART: The first major surrealists art assignment was commissioned by Ben Marden, who is building his new Riviera. Saul Schary will do four giant murals, one to be entitled "Evolution of a Jag." . . . Sam H. Harris: John Steinbeck, who is working on the dramatization of his book, "Of Mice and Men," submitted a first draft—without providing for any intermissions between acts. "Intermissions would destroy the mood," he explained before he was convinced of the error. "Besides, intermissions are for clacking women!"

* * * *

CLARK GABLE: That property man who joined you on that lion hunt in Arizona, and to whom you presented the live lion you captured, is very much distressed now. The lion requires three quarts of milk and five pounds of raw beef daily, more than the prop man can afford on his $15 a week salary. He offered it gratis to the circus at Los Angeles. "You could advertise it as 'The Lion Caught Personally by Clark Gable.'" But even the circus wouldn't have it!

MAX GORDON: Guy Robertson just returned after the road tour of "The Great Waltz"—the show based upon the life of Johann Strauss. Robertson's prized possession is the review of that Dallas critic, who wrote that the show would be all right if it had had one song-hit! . . . Albert Einstein; Max Schuster, who published "Men and Mathematics," attended the Scripta Mathematica dinner, and told the eminent mathematicians assembled there: "I came here because I had an axiom to grind." . . . Eddie Dvis: While you're still holding out for more dough, Stuff Smith was signed last night for the movie, "52nd Street." . . . Equity: The Understudies Club will be paid by N. B. C. for a series of sustaining broadcasts.

JACK KIRKLAND: Elaine Ellis, who is touring Europe, just arrived in Moscow. On the day before she sailed some one asked her how she could afford such a trip. "Well, I'm an actress, and I saved $15 each week out of my salary." . . . "But it's such a long, expensive trip," the heckler insisted. "How could you do that on $15 a week savings" . . . "Well," Elaine explained, "the show I've been in is 'Tobacco Road!'"

LOUIS B. MAYER: Clare Boothe, who will get $12,000 for six weeks' work from M.-G.-M., isn't interested in the money. Before starting on her film assignment she'll spend a few days in Hollywood, then go to Hawaii and practically spend her future film earnings there . . . Groucho Marx: Harpo ate some matzohs at the Brown Derby Friday and told George S. Kaufman, with whom he was dining: "I love matzohs. Why can't I have them at my home regularly?" Harpo then asked for a phone, called his home, and without a word of introduction, shouted: "Get me some matzohs"—then hung up! . . . National Board of Review: You list the film, "La Kermesse Heroique" as being suitable for kids. It's charming—but so naughty.

* * * *

GEORGE VI: Your coronation also involved these complications . . . Dick Merrill's backer had asked an unusually high price to fly the coronation newsreels back to America. During these negotiations the newsreel companies made arrangements with the Hindenburg to alter its flight schedules so that the Zeppelin would return to America one day earlier and bring the films here. The Merrill deal, as a result, was canceled . . . But when the Hindenburg burned down there was no alternative. And so they signed Merrill—whose backer demanded, and received, twice the sum asked for last week.

FATHER DIVINE: Angels' wings aren't quite spotless. The Cascades Laundry just contracted to launder the Angels' wings used by the girls in the Paradise show . . . A. S. P. C. A.: William Janney, the movie actor, just got a summons from a cop—for letting his pet spaniel run loose, without a leash, in Central Park. Tuesday he went to court, paid the $1 fine, and on the way out the arresting cop stopped him—and asked for Janney's autograph . . . Moss Hart: Your brother, Bernie, bought a new car yesterday and took your mother driving. She wanted to know the name of every car they passed, and Bernie got dizzy reeling off "Packard," "Buick," "Chrysler," etc. Finally, to change the subject, he pointed to some one on the sidewalk, and said: "Look, mom—Ilka Chase." . . . "Hmmm, who cares?" Mrs. Hart replied. "Give me an American car any time."

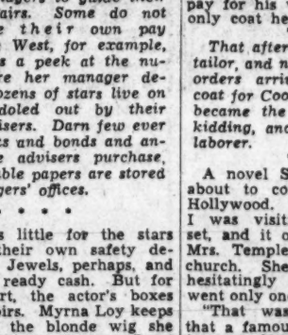
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Picking the Weak Spot.

Expert defense might be defined as the process of detecting the one weak spot in the enemy's line of fortifications. Presumably the declarer's contract (if bid voluntarily and not in competition) represents at least the approximate value of his hand combined with dummy. That being so, there should not be several methods by which the contract can be defeated. There is more apt to be only one and sometimes that one is not superficially apparent. Consider today's hand.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	2 ♠
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

South's second bid was questionable. His first had been a "nearminnie" and the fact that his spade King had been virtually marked as a full trick did not warrant a free rebid.

West opened his top spade. East won with the Ace and promptly laid down the diamond King, following with a low diamond. West won with the Ace, and, counting that declarer as well as his own partner was now out of diamonds, blindly shifted to a club. Declarer won, and led the Queen of hearts. West covered, with a feeling of helplessness. The Ace won, and on a heart return East's nine and West's ten impotently fell under the Jack. The rest of the hand was a laydown.

It should have required very little imagination on West's part to have realized that there was precisely one chance to defeat the contract. On lead with the diamond Ace, he should have known that declarer and not East had the club Ace. Declarer's bid had already been proved as pretty weak, and with all the cards accounted for it was unthinkable that declarer could be missing the club Ace. Obviously, if East had the club Queen, it could do no good to lead a club.

The one chance was to promote the heart King to the trick-taking value that West assigned it before he saw the Ace come down on his left. A diamond continuation would have done the trick. The one card that East might hold to save an almost lost cause was the heart nine and, as may be seen, he did have that card. On a third round of diamonds East would merely have had to ruff in with the heart nine in order to force an honor from declarer, and then West's King-ten would have regained full value.

Paraguay's 126th Year Of Freedom Celebrated

An hour before the reception given by the Minister of Paraguay and Senora de Busk Codas yesterday afternoon, the hostess finished the dress which she was to wear and on which she had been working for three days and nights. Like most South American women, Senora de Busk Codas likes to sew. Sleeveless, her gown was made of crepe striped patriotically in her country's colors—red, white and blue—for yesterday Paraguayans were celebrating the 126th anniversary of their country's independence. The patriotic touch was carried further in the red, white and blue beads worn by the Minister's wife, and an American Flag and a flag of their country stood side by side in the room at the Carlton where they received.

The Minister welcomed his guests in the fluent English he learned when a student at Cornell University—class of 1912. Senora de Busk Codas, who is taller than one expects a South American woman to be, is very handsome and a woman of few words.

Latin American diplomats in Washington have a reputation for lavish parties, and yesterday's reception carried out the rule. Waiters even handed around hot chocolate sauce to go with the little plates of ice cream. There were fried shrimps, steaming oysters, masses of sandwiches, pastries and trays of hors d'oeuvre. At one end of the room was a bar with every conceivable kind of drink, champagne being the most popular.

The very first guest to arrive was the Peruvian Ambassador, Senor Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander, closely followed by Mrs. Borah, who wore a long black cape and a pearl necklace.

Many others from the South American countries turned out to help celebrate Paraguay's independence day, including the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil, who usually decline afternoon invitations. Senora de Espil, one of Washington's best-dressed women, wore a double scarf of silver foxes over her black crepe frock and a tiny yellow pill-box hat.

The Minister of Uruguay, Mr. J. Richling, came in with Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State. Mrs. Hull's tiny hat was made entirely of artificial daisies, and she, too, wore a silver fox scarf with her black silk frock, embroidered on the shoulders and sleeves in white.

The Irish Free State Minister, Mr. Michael MacWhite, chatted with Representative Caroline O'Day. The Minister is planning to spend the summer in Washington and hopes to be joined by his son, Elon, a student at Edinburgh University.

One of the loveliest outfits at the party was the gown of Mrs. Thomas Burke—a black crepe model with white organdy ruching at the neck, and a tiny black hat with two white wings standing up in front. She was accompanied by Mr. Burke.

The Brazilian Ambassador, Mr. Oswaldo Aranha, was accompanied by the Charge d'Affaires, Mr. Bueno do Prado. Others there were the Austrian Minister, Mr. Edgar Prochnik; Mrs. John H. Overton, wife of the Senator from Louisiana; Mrs. Thomas Dawson, with her daughter, Lilita—they leave May 22 for four months in Brazil; the former President of Panama and Mme. Ricardo Alfaro; Mrs. Ernest G. Draper, wife of the Assistant Secretary of Commerce, and Dr. Leo Rowe, director of the Pan American Union.

Herr Hans Luther to Leave Tonight For California and Round-the-World Trip

The former German Ambassador, Herr Hans Luther, will leave tonight for San Francisco, where he will sail for a trip around the world before returning to his country. He will be accompanied to California by his daughter, Fraulein Eva Marie Luther, who will return later and sail for Europe from New York. His other daughter, Fraulein Gertrude Luther, already has sailed for Germany.

The Ambassador of Mexico, Senor Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, was presented the Haitian Great Cross of Merit and Honor yesterday morning by the Minister of Haiti, Mr. Elie Lescot.

The presentation was made at the Mexican Embassy, where the members of the staffs of the Embassy, Haitian Legation and the Dominican Legation were entertained at an informal reception. Mr. Lescot was Minister to the Dominican Republic before coming here for duty.

The French Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet will entertain at a farewell luncheon today in honor of the retiring Naval Attache of the Embassy and Mme. Sable, who will leave next week for Tunisia. The Air Attache and Mme. Champsaur will give a tea this afternoon in honor of Rear Admiral and Mme. Sable.

The Ambassador and Mme. Bonnet will go to Princeton Thursday, where they will visit the President of the University and Mrs. Dodd.

The Minister of Uruguay, Dr. Jose Richling, has as his guest at the Carlton Hotel Mr. Cesar Charlone, the Minister of Finance from Uruguay. Mr. Charlone, with his secretary, Mr. Antonio Sanz Garcia, will be in Washington for several days before returning to Montevideo.

Latvian Envoy and Mme. Bilmanis To Be Hosts at Reception Today

The Latvian Minister and Mme. Bilmanis will entertain at a reception today for members of the Latvian colony of Washington, in celebration of the third anniversary of the constitution of 1934, which reorganized the government of that country.

Last evening the Minister and Mme. Bilmanis entertained at a dinner in honor of the Minister of Lithuania and Mme. Zadeikis. They have as their guest for the week-end Mr. Rudolph Shiller, newly appointed consul general of Latvia in New York.

The Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring will be hosts at the luncheon to be given today at their home Woodlawn by members of the Woman's National Democratic Club.

The Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper were ranking guests at a dinner given last evening by the Assistant Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Theodore A. Walters, in their apartment at the Roosevelt. The dinner was in honor of Mrs. David Coker, of Hartsville, S. C., Mrs. Roper's daughter, and Mr. Coker.

Harrison–Clark Wedding Announced

Bride and Groom Plan Home in Salisbury After July 1.

Mrs. George R. Harrison announced the marriage of her daughter, Miss Ruth Lillian Harrison, to Mr. Ernest Collins Clark, which took place at Fairfax, Va., May 1, with the Rev. Raymond Maxwell officiating.

After the first of July Mr. Clark and his bride will be at home at Salisbury, Md. Mrs. Clark, who attended Goucher College and George Washington University, has been Field Advisor for the Girl Scouts in Baltimore for the past two years. She is the daughter of the late Col. Harrison and is a grand-daughter of Brig. Gen. S. W. Miller, United States Army, retired, of Washington.

Mr. Clark is a graduate of Washington and Lee University and received his law degree at the University of Maryland.

To Leave for Bluemont.

Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, wife of the Counselor of the Netherlands Legation, and her young son will leave Washington early next month for Bluemont, Va., where she has taken a cottage for the summer. Count van Rechteren will stay at the Roosevelt Hotel, where they have an apartment, and will go to Bluemont to join his family for week-ends.

First Lady to Plant Girl Scout Camellia

Rite to Mark Participation in Homes Drive.

Mrs. Roosevelt will plant a Camelia japonica plant today in the memory garden of the National Girl Scout Little House, 1750 New York avenue. The plant comes from Savannah, Ga., the birthplace of Girl Scouting in the United States.

The planting will represent Girl Scout participation in the national better homes in America campaign and will emphasize the landscaping phase of that program, which points out that shrubs and trees are needed to make a house a home. A scale model of the Savannah Little House, where the first Girl Scout troop was formed by Mrs. Juliette Low, will be on display.

The National Little House Committee includes Mrs. Henry H. Flather, Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, Mrs. B. F. Cheatham and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes. Senators and Representatives who form the District Committee, the District Commissioners and their wives and the board of the local Girl Scout Council will be their guests.

German Envoy and Frau Dieckhoff Arrive

Underwood & Underwood.

Tolans Arrange Southern Party

'Gone With the Wind' Dance, Barbecue Are Planned for Tomorrow.

A unique party is being planned by Representative and Mrs. John B. Tolan, who have issued invitations for a "Gone With the Wind" costume dance tomorrow evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Noris Hovey, of Berkeley, Calif., parents of Mrs. John Tolan, jr. Guests have been acked to represent the characters in Margaret Mitchell's novel. The hosts will stage a barbecue similar to the one described in the first part of the book.

Among the guests invited are the entire Congressional delegation from California, Representative Claude E. Parsons, of Illinois; Representative Hatton W. Somers, of Texas; Representative and Mrs. Emmet O'Neal, of Kentucky; Representative Louis C. Rabaut, of Michigan; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Tuohy, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Jenks, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bond, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Whitlock, Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Kirk, Mr. and Mrs. Addison Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Bradish Carroll, Miss Dorothy Smith, Mr. William Weber, Miss Abbie Belle Colden, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Williams, jr., Mr. Vincent Ford, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Tolan, jr., Miss Muriel Dempsey, Miss Katherine Pritchard and Miss Mary Dempsey.

Women Will Honor Mr. Greet and Cast

Honoring Mr. Maurice Greet and members of the cast of "Love's Labour Lost," which will be presented on June 8 and June 9, the executive board of the District branch of the National Woman's Party will entertain at tea this afternoon at 4 o'clock in the garden of the Alva Belmont House, 144 B street northeast.

Dr. Miriam Oatman, chairman of the board, will head the receiving line. She will be assisted by Mrs. Karl Greene, Mrs. Lois Babcock, Miss Mildred Curran and Miss Clara Manderschied. A number of the founders and national officers of the National Woman's Party will be present to greet the members of the cast. Miss Leila Carrington will speak on this Shakesperean comedy, which will have its first performance here next month with Washington players in the leading roles.

Announce Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Jones, of Washington, Va., today announce the engagement of their niece, Miss Keith Virginia Jones, to Mr. James Mulford Pharr, of Newport News, Va. Both Miss Jones and Mr. Pharr have a number of friends in Washington.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn

A. Emmett McCran, that dashing young man about town, was having himself quite an enjoyable time with Kitty Harrison at the Pall Mall room recently. Kitty, who can always be counted upon to wear something utterly ravishing, had on a heather lace gown, made on long, swirling lines and set off with a brief jacket.

That particular evening the Senator's daughter and her escort were making up a foursome with Julia Harris and Bill Ellington. Julia's frock, of apricot mousseline de soie, had enormous puffed sleeves and tiny blue bows down the front. The two girls were all but putting on a style show their very own.

• • • •

Speaking of style shows—went out to the Shoreham to see Elizabeth Jobe's creations. Elizabeth, who is one of the busiest members of the Junior League, is one of those energetic persons who, after having a yen for designing and planning lovely things, not only studied it for a hobby, but turned to it in all seriousness as soon as she was "out," and the first few hectic whirls of grown-up party going were over.

The models, two of whom were Meg McMullen and Agnes Hartz, strolled through the main dining room of the hotel, pausing informally at each table to answer any questions there might be. Two of the most interested spectators happened to be sitting just a table away from us. No—they weren't debutantes, nor brides-to-be—they, believe it or not, were from the diplomatic set—Otakar Kabelac, of the Czechoslovakia Legation, and Joao de Deus Ramos, of Portugal. Each costume was carefully scrutinized and the merits of the coloring and material were immediately discussed—we know, because our own ears caught some pertinent remarks along that line.

At another nearby table we saw Helen Drury, who looked as though she could have joined the parade without anyone's suspecting she was not one of the models. Her hat, a tricky model of dark blue, had unique streamers of red.

Out in "peacock alley" Mrs. Gish, mother of the famous Lillian, smartly gowned in black with a small hat, and "Toots" watched the passing world. Toots, we might explain, is a miniature Pekingese, with brown eyes and a most engaging manner.

We happened to be in the lobby when the officers of the 75th Club (Congressional ladies, you know) were fluttering about in anticipation of the arrival of the guest of honor, Mrs. Roosevelt. Some one started the question of which door the First Lady would enter. This threw the reception committee in a turmoil (they could not be in two places at once, not for anybody). But all's well that ends well. Mrs. Roosevelt arrived, smiling and gracious, attired in dark blue, a handsome silver fox scarf over one shoulder and a wide brimmed hat. From the moment she stepped in the door she began explaining why she was late. Goodness only knows that if any of the rest of us had half as many things to claim our attention as the First Lady does—in all probability we would never get there.

Caught a glimpse of Herr Hans Luther, the retiring German Ambassador (perhaps we should say former), having luncheon with the Frank Heywoods, of the British Embassy, and that attractive newcomer to the British Embassy, Keith Officer. All of which made us wonder just where, and where the new envoy from the Rhine—Herr Hans Dieckoff—who arrived only yesterday morning—was having his luncheon. We sort of expected the Herr Hanses to get together and talk shop immediately.

Envoys Here Make Plans For Vacation

Minister of Finland and Wife Already Sail for Homeland.

Other Diplomats Prepare to Escape Heat of Capital.

Senators, Congressmen and their wives are by this time pretty well resigned to endure a summer in Washington—through July anyway—but another part of official society the Diplomatic Corps—is already deep in plans for departure to cooler climes. The Minister of Finland and Mme. Jarnefelt sailed last night on the Polish liner Batory for their country, although the Minister plans to return early in July so that the Secretary of Legation, Mr. von Numers, may also enjoy a vacation.

Mme. Peter, wife of the Swiss Minister, already has booked passage for early in June. The Minister will join her in July at their country place near Geneva, where they will spend the summer. Another diplomat who usually spends the summers in his own country is the Rumanian Minister, Mr. Charles Davila, who will sail for Rumania within the next few weeks, although he has not yet picked the date.

The Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Aranha had such a good time at Bluemont last summer that they again have leased Johannesburg, the home of Mrs. William Chapin Huntington. They spent last week-end there and later this month will make it their headquarters for the season. Mr. and Mrs. Huntington are returning to their other Bluemont home, Journey's End, for the first time in several years, having spent last summer traveling in Europe.

When the French liner Paris points her nose toward Europe May 28, she will have aboard several members of the Diplomatic Corps, including Mme. Fotitch. The wife of the Yugoslav Minister will be accompanied on the trip by Miss Sibilla Skidelsky, who will go to Paris—she used to study at the Sorbonne there—and then to Italy and Hungary, returning to Washington in October. Her stepfather and mother, the Portuguese Minster and Mme. de Bianchi, will join her in Paris for a brief stay before going to Portugal for the summer.

The Ambassador from Spain, Senor Dr. Don Fernando de los Rios, is going somewhere for the summer, but has not yet decided where.

The Peruvian Ambassador has been in this country longer than any other except Sir Ronald Lindsay, dean of the Diplomatic Corps, but he evidently has not yet had his fill of "seeing America." For, when he goes on vacation this summer, Senor Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander will spend it traveling in the United States, although when and where he has not yet decided.

Caroline Hughes Selects June 26 As Wedding Date

Miss Caroline Hughes, daughter of Senator and Mrs. James H. Hughes, of Delaware, has selected Saturday, June 26, as the date of her wedding to Dr. John Patrick Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Martin, of Philadelphia. Miss Hughes will return on Monday from the home of her family in Dover, Del., where she is spending the week-end.

Later in the month Miss Hughes will entertain at a house party at her summer cottage at Rehoboth Beach. All the 22 Daughters of the Senate have been invited, and Mrs. Prew Savoy, the former Lyla Townsend, will open her house to take care of the overflow of guests.

First Lady Is Honored By 75th Club

Group Gives Wheel-Chair to Boy in Name of Its Guest.

A luncheon with a theme song dedicated to the guest of honor was given yesterday at the Shoreham by the Seventy-fifth Club for Mrs. Roosevelt. Mrs. John Murdock, the president, and wife of Representative Murdock, of Arizona, was author of the verse and her son, Mr. David Murdock, a teacher in Arizona, composer of the melody.

The First Lady was greeted with the selection played by the Marine Band Orchestra as she entered the small ballroom of the Shoreham, where the luncheon was held. Later it was sung by Mr. Harold G. Clark, secretary to Representative Murdock, as soloist with a chorus of club members, and copies—little scrolls tied in red, white and blue ribbon—were souvenirs at each place.

The luncheon, which was the first the Seventy-fifth Club has had opportunity to give for Mrs. Roosevelt because it is the newest of the Congressional groups, was designed to be an informal party and to convey the members' high regard for her. Under the leadership of Mrs. Murdock, the club accomplished its purpose in an original way. It presented a gift to her—not a personal keepsake but, in her name, gave a wheelchair to a crippled boy in one of the Washington schools.

Mrs. Jerry Voorhis, who announced the gift, explained that the members had decided nothing they could do would be such a fitting tribute as a gift which would exemplify the First Lady's broad sympathy and interest in helping others.

First Lady Talks.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who made a short address before the gift was announced, already had mentioned the importance of using thought in giving, instead of spending large sums on useless articles which could not benefit the recipent. She also spoke of her trip to Seattle and of the spirit of the young aviators to whom she talked—courage which risks life to conquer a new element and thereby serve; which has no dread of what lies ahead. This, she said, is the spirit needed in individuals of our Nation.

Seated with the club president and the First Lady at the head table were other club officers, and Mrs. Ford K. Brown, novelist, of Annapolis, a special guest. She was introduced by Mrs. John Coffee and spoke briefly of her experience in writing mystery stories, under the names of "David Frome" and "Leslie Ford."

Mrs. Roosevelt wore a gown of navy blue tucked net with sleeves which were close fitting to the elbow and fell in deep ruffles below. Her wide black hat was trimmed with a cluster of large white daisies in front and she wore a corsage of orchids, and forget-me-nots presented her by the club.

Mrs. Murdock wore a tailored frock of natural-colored linen trimmed with novel red and green buttons down the front, a broad brown belt and a wide-brimmed breton sailor hat matching the belt. Mrs. Brown was in a costume of navy blue with a small hat with upturned brim, and Mrs. Coffee, in a matching dress and hat of toast brown—her hat also broad-brimmed and turned off the face.

Others Attending.

Others at the head of table were Mrs. Jerry O'Connell, treasurer of the club, who has served as "doorkeeper" before the luncheon, and who wore a rust astin dress and large brown hat; Mrs. Daniel Reed, president of the Congressional Club, in a black sheer dress with a large black hat trimmed in white flowers; Mrs. Vincent Harrington, in a spring print; Mrs. John Sparkman, wearing a costume of golden brown; Mrs. Vorhis, in a beige cape suit and large brown hat; Mrs. F. O. Towey, wearing beige with a black hat, and Mrs. Charles R. Clason, in a sheer print of red and black.

The tables were arranged in an E-shape with bouquets of red and yellow tulips and narcissi. The flowers were from the Botanical Gardens.

Mrs. Coffee was chairman of the committee on arrangements for the luncheon, assisted by Mrs. Vincent F. Harrington, Mrs. Lewis M. Long and Mrs. Laurence F. Arnold.

Mrs. Voorhis, who had charge of publicity, was assisted by Mrs. Luther V. Patrick and Mrs. Edwin V. Champion.

The seventy-fifth club was organized last winter soon after the opening of Congress and has had an unusual program embracing the wide variety of interests of its members, riding, swimming, archery and study groups.

Rectors Plan Tour Of Virginia Homes

Residents of Alexandria will serve as hostesses this afternoon during the tour of old houses scheduled by the Rector's Aid Society of St. Paul's Church. They will explain the historic tradition of the homes or point out the most interesting pieces of furniture.

Among those who will serve in this capacity are Mrs. George H. Evans, Mrs. William D. Ord, Miss Earle Taylor, Mrs. George Klipstein, Miss Anne Herbert, Mrs. L. G. Porter, Miss Lily Marbury, Mrs. John Marshall, Mrs. W. V. Wilson and Miss Carrie Stribling.

Another garden tour scheduled in Alexandria is that sponsored by the Woman's Club and the Garden Club of that city, which will take place on Tuesday. Proceeds will go toward landscaping and planting the new Alexandria Library grounds.

Eighteen gardens in Alexandria; Rosemont and Braddock will be opened to the public from 2 to 6 p. m.

Miss Kimball Is Tea Guest

Mrs. Stefan and Mrs. King Are Hostesses for the Affair.

Mrs. Karl Stefan, wife of Representative Stefan, of Nebraska, and Mrs. Samuel W. King, wife of the Hawaiian Delegate in Congress, will be hostesses at a tea to be given this afternoon at the Congressional Club for Miss Louise Kimball, daughter of the late Representative Kimball, of Michigan, and Mrs. Henry M. Kimball. Miss Kimball and her mother are making their home in Washington. The former's wedding to Mr. Allen Barnes, of Philadelphia, will take place June 5 at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, wife of Senator Vandenberg, will pour at the tea table this afternoon, as will Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, president of the Congressional Club; Mrs. Jessie P. Wolcott and Mrs. Roy O. Woodruff, whose husbands are Representatives from Michigan.

In St. Louis.

Mrs. Jerome Horwitz is spending some time in St. Louis, and Middletown, Ohio.

Miss Lita Graham And Mr. Bristol Arrive in Capital

Miss Lita Graham and Mr. Frederick Bristol, of New York, have arrived in Washington to assist in the musico-dramatic recital which Dorothy Seegar will give at the Wardman Park Theater Monday evening at 8:45 o'clock. Miss Seegar, in private life, is Mrs. Paul Hatch, of Washington.

Among Washingtonians who plan to attend the recital is the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins.

Mr. and Mrs. Compton, Party Leave for Ohio

Accompanied by the Misses Catherine Compton, Nancy Lee Richardson and Mary Ashby, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Compton left Washington yesterday for Wooster, Ohio, to attend the May festivities of Wooster College. Their son, Wilson, jr., is a member of the freshman class.

Miss Irma Wooding, daughter of the Rev and Mrs. Henry B. Wooding, of Washington, is also a student at Wooster College. She will be crowned Queen of the May festivities there today.

Club to Honor Speaker, Wife

The Speaker of the House and Mrs. William Bankhead will be guests of honor at a reception to be given by members of the Congressional Club Tuesday evening at 9 o'clock at headquarters of the club, 2001 New Hampshire avenue. Alabama delegates and associate members of the club will assist in receiving.

Also assisting during the evening will be Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Mrs. William M. Whittington, Mrs. Edward P. Costigan, Mrs. Claude A. Fuller, Mrs. Hampton P. Fulmer, Mrs. William W. Arnold, Mrs. Harry C. Ransley, Mrs. Arthur H. Greenwood, Mrs. Brent Spence and Mrs. Edward R. Burke.

Capital Visitors.

Mrs. Samuel Silverstein and Mrs. Harry Silverstein, of Charleston, W. Va., are passing the week-end in the Capital.

Hospital Group Benefit Scheduled for Saturday

Fortune-Telling Tent to Feature Garden Program at Walter Reed; Zeta Beta Sorority Will Meet Today and Tomorrow.

Among the features of the annual bridge and garden party for the benefit of the Memorial Chapel Guild and the Army Relief Society, which is to be held Saturday, May 22, from 2 until 5:30 p. m., in the Red Cross House and Formal Garden of Army Medical Center, Walter Reed General Hospital, will be the fortune-telling tent with Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis as the fortune-teller. Mrs. Lewis, who is famous for her interesting predictions of the future, has made this tent the mecca of hundreds of persons each year at the time of the birthday party of the Grey Ladies and last year many were turned away unable to have their fortunes told. Mrs. Lewis will be at the garden party early, and it may be that she will find it possible to begin telling fortunes while the bridge party is in progress.

A number of handmade posters are being made announcing the event by several young artists under direction of the poster committee, including Mrs. Oral B. Bolibaugh and Mrs. Francis Reynolds, of the Chapel Guild, and in co-operation with the committee on publicity of which Mrs. Ira Bennett, of the Grey Ladies, is chairman. Mrs. Bennett is also chairman o. the fortune-telling tent and is arranging to install a popular Washington woman as "bouncer" in case Mrs. Lewis' many "clients" are inclined to remain too long in the tent.

The ticket committee for the benefit has two chairmen, Mrs. Rufus L. Holt, of the Chapel Guild, and Mrs. Ralph Murrell, of the Grey Ladies. Other members of the ticket committee are Mrs. William D. Fleming, Mrs. John F. Bohlander, Mrs. Frank J. Ervin, Mrs. William S. Stone, Mrs. Ralph H. Simmons, Mrs. Francis W. Gustitis and Mrs. Joseph H. McNinch.

Eastern members of the Alpha Zeta Beta national nonacademic sorority will meet at Wardman Park Hotel today and tomorrow for an Eastern social, as guests of the local chapters of the sorority.

The banquet tonight will be a get-together. The national chapter will be represented by Marion Martin, national vice president, and Elsie Ramby, national secretary. Also attending will be past national presidents, Ada Meyer Hewitt, Helen Baker and Pegge Cooper.

Preceding the banquet, ten new members will be installed into the sorority.

The last event of the visit will be breakfast tomorrow morning.

Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan was hostess to the members of Chapter K. D. E. O., at luncheon Monday. Miss Ethel Blake of Chapter B was also a guest.

A feature of the business meeting was the distribution of the new yearbooks. These were prepared by a committee headed by Mrs. Robert N. McMillan. Mrs. Morgan entertained the group with a description of a trip which she took recently to the magnolia gardens at Charleston, S. C.

The Alumnae Association of Sacred Heart Academy will hold its card and bingo party for the benefit of the association, Tuesday, in the Sacred Heart School building. Miss Florence Gucker is chairman, assisted by Miss McDonald, Miss Helen Mulally and Miss Mary Reges.

Abraham Lincoln Circle, Ladies of the G. A. R., held a memorial tree-planting Saturday in honor of four noted members, Mrs. Vinnie Ream Hoxie, artist and sculptress; Miss Clara Barton, founder of the American Red Cross; Mrs. Helen Nelson Doocy, writer and patriotic instructor, and Mrs. Mida C. Peabody, a past president and only living pioneer member who has given faithful service since Lincoln Circle was organized, at Independence avenue, near Twelfth and D streets southwest, by the Agriculture Department.

Mrs. Sara E. Deeds, past circle president and director from the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, was in charge of ceremonies. Mrs. Ellis Logan, past president of the District of Columbia Federation, made the address.

The Society of Free Lance Writers met at the Shoreham Hotel May 6. Stories were presented for discussion by Miss Ivy Lindsley, Maj. Dyer and Mrs. Tilton.

Mrs. Edith M. Edwards, Mrs. Hattie McIntire, Mrs. Elizabeth Aldrich and Mrs. Pearl Goldenberg will read original stories at the meeting May 20.

Awards for the winning entries in the recent contest will be made at the annual dinner at the Shoreham June 3. Reservations are in charge of Maj. E. L. Dyer, Emerson 3884.

Should labor unions be regulated by the government?

Read America Speaks SUNDAY IN The Washington Post

In view of recent developments in labor, particular significance is placed on America's sentiment in regard to government control of Union organizations. Tomorrow, AMERICA SPEAKS also, reports the nation's answer to this question: "What should be done to relieve unemployment in America?"

Hot, Cold Baths Recapture That Schoolgirl Look

Cold Towels and Rub-Downs Bring Blood to Surface and Make Skin Glow.

By Carolyn Abbott.

THE PROBLEM of looking fresh in the evening after a day's work in an office or store is one for the working girl and not the debutante. The girl who earns her daily bread by pounding a typewriter has neither time nor money to spend hours each day under the hands of a beautician. Yet the modern Cinderella must compete with her more fortunate sisters in the evening.

The business woman may take suggestions from the Hollywood stars, for they work hard, too, and have the same problem.

Here are a few ideas gathered from moving picture actresses for beauty pick-ups:

Olivia de Havilland throws her heart and soul into her work. At the end of the day she finds herself well fagged, but she can always whip herself into new life by taking quick alternate hot and cold baths and then spraying her body with cool and fragrant cologne.

Most persons who work are straining their eyes many hours during the day. Though the screen girls don't use their eyes for close work they find the glaring lights just as trying. Beverly Roberts has a refreshing eye trick which will make any girl feel fresh after a hard day's work. She warms her eye bath and holds the cups to her eyes for over a minute. Then, if she has only 10 minutes, she lies down in a darkened room and covers her eyelids with cotton pads soaked in astringent.

Cold towels are Gloria Dickson's pepper-upper. During the noon hour and after removing her make-up in the evening Gloria applies Turkish towels soaked in ice water to her face and wrists. It is worth two hours of sleep.

Veda Ann Borg follows the age-old trick of athletes after a hard workout. She drinks a glass of water in which a bit of salt has been stirred and it gives more new life than a whole flock of cocktails.

If there is someone about to give you a rub-down, that is one way to make the body tingle with health, but Jane Wyman says she can do it herself. After a sudsy bath she gives herself a vigorous rubbing with a Turkish towel and pats her skin with a little rubber paddle. This brings the blood to the surface and makes her skin glow.

Sometimes the feet are the root of all weariness. Some persons suggest a mustard footbath, but not Marie Wilson. She says to lie down with the feet on a higher level than the body for 10 minutes, as this is worth two hours or more of ordinary reclining.

A good suggestion for older women is a good facial mask, removed with cold water. Simple masks are a white of an egg or a yeast cake made into a paste. They should be removed when dry and the face dashed with cold water. For those who haven't time for the mask an ice-cold astringent is helpful.

Lollipop Bouquet.

A bouquet of lollipops in many colors make an attractive centerpiece for the children's party table. The lollipops may be fitted into a flower holder that is placed in a bowl or low basket.

Claire Tilden Dress Pattern

YOUNG YOUNG, very gay—this sparkling "Spring Beauty!" And it's so easy to make that 'Teens or Twenties will want to get busy on it themselves, even though they're "amateur seamstresses!" It will prove worth your while to send for Pattern 333, select a few yards of bright-colored cotton, and stitch up this practical little frock, for its simple pattern pieces fit so easily together, that the whole thing's turned out in no time. See how the bodice is "pointed up" by the upraising skirt yokes—form-flattering, indeed! Gay ric-rac smartly calls attention to the Peter Pan collar and cuffs of the puffed sleeves. Detailed Sewing Guide accompanies this pattern.

Pattern 333 is cut in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 16 requires 3¼ yards 36-inch fabric and 1⅛ yards ric-rac.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, May 14.

THE GREATEST AUCTION sale of art objects in the history of our time, I dare swear, has just been completed, having lasted five frabjous days and driven daft every auction fiend (meaning, perhaps, woman) in the metropolitan area. It was that astounding free-for-all at the Long Island home of the former Nicholas J. Brady, that 87-room place which now becomes a house of studies for the Society of Jesus.

ALICE HUGHES.

I struggled out to Manhasset for the second last day to look at Inisfada (Gaelic for Long Island) for the last time as a millionaire layman's earthly palace. And grateful I am that I saw the fabulous place before it was turned over to the Jesuit students to use for study, meditation and prayer.

Think of a main corridor 400 feet long—eight complete guest suites which have harbored, among others, Queen Marie of Rumania and the former Queen Ena of Spain—a great hall measuring 75 by 36 feet and two stories high. Please go ahead and think—my head is throbbing. I actually touched a toe to the sixteenth-century Ispahan carpet, whose presale value was set at $100,000. Incredible! Well, 2,000 things were put up for sale during those five days—some priceless, some mere gimcracks. The late Brady is with his fathers these seven years; his widow is in Rome as the bride of William J. Babington Macaulay, Irish Minister to the Vatican, and the enormous house is about ready to receive its pale and earnest young theologues.

I wouldn't have missed it. The whole thing seemed a strange hangover from imperial days, when dollars grew on gooseberry bushes. And I'm darned glad to be back in my modest six-room hovel on Manhattan! It gave me goose-flesh!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Now and then the kids of New York do have some outdoor fun, pavements or no! The other day a real live coyote got away from the Prospect Park Zoo and was chased through the streets of Brooklyn by 200 lads howling "Wolf!"—and glad the poor thing was to be captured, I'll bet. The coyote's name, by the way, is Chauncey," through no fault of his own . . .

As a connoisseur of publicity pictures, my favorite for the year to date is that of the superb Marlene Dietrich playing a musical saw. And not with her beautiful toes, either. She looked as rapt as though she were fiddling a sonata on a Strad. Pooh is the word!

They gave Gertrude Lawrence a farewell party the other evening, for Gert goes back to the motherland, returning in the fall to star in "Susan and God," by Rachael Crothers. Among the old stand-bys on deck to ta-ta Gertie were Helen Hayes, Constance Cummings, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Lytell, Sheila Barrett and Helen Menken.

Tucked away at the bottom of a page I find a paragraph to the effect that the Filipino ladies have won the right to vote if they choose. Good going, girls, and may you know what to do with the ballot, now you have it. It's one trick to get it—quite another to apply it smartly, as we've well learned.

The James Cromwell-Doris Duke family is widely divided on the subject of newspaper cameramen. The other evening, at a night club, I heard Jim say, "Go ahead, shoot, boys!" while Doris screamed, hid her face and ran like an antelope. Well, all I can say is, may all their differences be as trivial as a flash bulb or no!

Nancy Hale is collecting the letters of the late Elinor Wylie to be put into a book, with a memoir by Mr. Knopf, who puts things in books.

In common with the rest of my sex, I have suffered from acute perfume-leakage in the handbag. Now a local gadget-vendor sends me a gadget called Scentinal, said to prevent such minor tragedies. It's a flat metal dingus. I am taking it on my next trip—whether to California or Coney Island—and will report on it in due course.

Picnic Season Brings Thrill Of Al Fresco Cooking, Eating

Prepared Meals or Just 'Makings' Provide Countless Opportunities for Hostess to Show Originality as Caterer.

By Rebekah Blake.

The picnic season is here. You can't start too soon getting out in the open for your evening suppers, after a long day of being cooped up in a house, office or school. And on Saturdays and Sundays a noontime luncheon is fun, for the "dishes" are soon out of the way and the afternoon is free for play. Or, just to be different, have Sunday breakfast in the park. It may sound like an unreasonable idea at first, but you will find yourself more than willing to greet the dawn some fine Sunday—especially if a delicious breakfast is the prize for such outstanding valor.

There is always a thrill in going on a fishing trip, a drive through the country or a hike in the woods, climaxed by a spicy picnic dinner. For you who eat the majority of your meals indoors, a roasted weiner in the open, with an ant on your wrist tastes five times as good as a perfectly broiled steak, with a waiter at your elbow.

Of course you don't know what the weather will be but if the day is cool, you will have use for a picnic fire to cook your meal. You can go back to nature and build your fire on the ground or you may happen on to a ready-made fireplace in the park. For a picnic with a fire, you pack the luncheon basket with the makings of the lunch rather than the ready-to-eat cold things you take along on hot days. Have a hot dish picnic now for there will be plenty of time later on for cold food. Cooking-out sprees are fun when they are well planned and that means making the fire in plenty of time so that it may burn down to a bed of growing coals, and not trying to cook many things over it, unless you are an expert.

Food Hamper Essential.

Perhaps the first step to follow in planning a picnic is to get a really suitable hamper or basket into which the food will be packed. Half the trouble of a picnic lies in packing the breakables so they will not rattle and chip and the food which is put in among the plates and cups always emerges much the worse for the experience. The hamper, therefore, should be fitted with plates, knives, forks and spoons, cups and glasses, all fastened in so tightly that they cannot slip, and so compactly that there is room for the luncheon as well. However, if this is not convenient, food will taste just as good from an ordinary basket or a pasteboard box.

In preparing a picnic meal, lay out first what would be needed to spread the informal table. Be sure you have sufficient plates, tumblers, cups, knivers, forks, spoons, paper napkins, table cloth and salt and pepper shakers.

Cook Coffee First.

If you prefer a hot beverage such as coffee, this may be prepared in advance and placed in a thermos bottle or jug. Or if you make it out in the open, get it out of the way before you cook your other food. Have long with you a good-sized coffee pot (or saucepan with a tight cover) and one-fourth pound of coffee tied in a square of cheese cloth large enough to let the coffee expand at least three times its bulk. Put two quarts of cold water in the pot or pan, drop in the bag of coffee and let soak for an hour or two. Then put the coffee on the fire, bring it to a boil, and let it simmer three minutes. Next, pull out the coffee bag and throw in one-half cup cold water to settle the coffee. Then let it stand where it will keep hot but not boil. It will be all the better for the ripening process.

Suggestions for Dishes.

Probably you have your favorite picnic dishes well in mind. But if not, here are a few suggestions:

Beginning with the meat, shall it be ground meat to make into hamburger cakes and broil over the picnic fire—for huge roll sandwiches the children clamor for? Or will you have bacon broiled on a forked stick or "kebabs," those tempting morsels of meat the size of one good bite, which you slip on a long stick or a metal skewer, each piece with a slice of onion to follow—then more meat, and more onion? You can use any kind of meat—beef, pork or lamb or a combination.

For a "weinie roast" you cook the frankfurters on a stick or on a grill or in a pan over the fire, each tempting sausage to be popped into a roll when it is done.

With your frying pan along, you can have scrambled eggs. Too, sausage broiled or pan fried over an open fire, with a bit of cheese, to top it off is a savory morsel.

Baked Food Practical.

A baking dish of scalloped potatoes or scalloped macaroni, cheese and tomatoes or baked beans will stay hot a surprisingly long time if wrapped well in newspapers for the journey.

For green things, garden lettuce, radishes and young onions are in season. Combine these with sliced tomatoes, cucumbers and green pepper slices in a picnic salad plate. Or you might like to slice tomatoes or onions to tuck into each sandwich with meat or eggs or cheese for filling.

The green tops of young onions chopped fine and mixed with cottage cheese is a new sandwich spread. Or you might use chopped pickled onions.

Fruit Good Dessert.

For dessert, there is, a fine selection of fruit on the markets now. Apples, oranges, grapefruit, bananas, fresh pineapple or stewed rhubarb make a good finish to the meal. Cookies and cake are appreciated by all and are handy to serve.

Every housewife knows best what the members of her family enjoy eating on a picnic but to be practical about the amount she prepares, the following calculations may prove helpful:

One quart of salad will serve six persons.

One 4 pound chicken will yield about three cups diced meat.

One-half pound coffee and 4 qarts of boiling water will make enough of the beverage to serve 16 persons.

One to one-half dozen lemons will make enough lemonade to serve 20 to 25 persons, depending largely on the size and juiciness of the fruit.

One pound of cold boiled ham will serve six to eight persons and 1 pound of meat loaf will provide for the same number.

Two-thirds cup creamed butter will spread both sides of 24 sandwiches. One pint of sandwich filling will fill 24 sandwiches.

Sauce Recipes To Win Prizes In Post Contest

How much better a steak or roast may be made with a sauce or dressing of some kind. And what a difference there is between plain vanilla ice cream and ice cream with chocolate or caramel sauce.

You have tasted head lettuce in its simple form and missed the piquant tang of salad dressing. Any dressing is better than none but with the correct one, the dish is perfect.

If you have a good recipe for a sauce, whether it is for meat, fish, vegetable or dessert, enter it in The Post recipe contest for next week. You may win one of the cash prizes which are $3 for first prize, $2 for second prize and $1 for each of the three additional prizes.

You may have a recipe for anchovy sauce, brown celery sauce, hollandaise, chutney, loganberry horseradish, mock mushroom, tomato, orange and olive sauce, oyster sauce, pimiento or Spanish sauce, bacon sauce or tartar sauce. Or you may have a favorite recipe for Thousand Island dressing, Russian or French dressing. Or for a dessert, you may like butter crunch chocolate sauce, butterscotch, peach dressing, or ginger or fudge sauce. Hot coffee sauce, lemon and pineapple sauce or peppermint sirup may win a prize for you.

Type or write your recipe neatly and send it to Rebekah Blake, The Post Food Editor, so she will receive it not later than next Saturday noon. Be sure to write your name and address clearly on your recipe.

Only one recipe may be submitted by each contestant.

Cook 3 or 4 sweet potatoes until almost soft in boiling salted water, drain, peel and cut in lengthwise slices one-half-inch thick. Place close together in oven platter, cover with 2 apples cut in thin slices and sprinkle with 3 tablespoons brown sugar. Prick 1 pound cocktail sausages, put over the apples and bake at 400 F. until cooked through.

Men Dislike Salads Because of Flat Taste

Most men turn up their noses at salads because they taste flat. Lettuce may be full of vitamins but it sure lacks punch, is their argument. The best way to make salad a two-fisted food is to add flavor. The smart woman either tosses her green salad in a tangy spicy dressing, or sees to it that the chief ingredients in her main-course salads are themselves well seasoned. Suggestions for appetizing results include:

Cayenne—just a dash—in potato salad.

Mustard seed sprinkled over cole-slaw.

Dish Mop Good Duster.

Sprinkle furniture polish on a small dish mop to clean the stairway railing. The dust will adhere to a small mop more easily than to a rag.

Electric Ovens Bake Delicious Cream Puffs

When baking cream puffs or eclairs the one-step, cold-oven way, made possible by the temperature and moisture controlled Hotpoint oven, drop the mixture by smaller spoonfuls than usual on the baking sheet; baked in the cold electric oven, cream puffs expand to greater size, producing not only a delicious crunchy product, but yielding more servings than the same recipe baked the ordinary way.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

After Ten Years' Marriage, Man Learns Wife Was Untrue While Engaged; Distraught, Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Ten years ago I married a girl to whom I had been engaged for two years. Due to a bad investment on borrowed money I was in debt at the time of our engagement. She knew of this obligation and agreed to wait until I could pay out. We were married in 1927 and, though I was not paid up in full, we worked together and cleared up the obligation.

* * * *

During the lean years following 1929 we often found the going hard but kept up spirit, always looking forward to better days. Today I have a good position with an income above the average. But now, just when we could enjoy some of the luxuries we were forced to deny ourselves in the beginning, the whole world has changed for me.

* * * *

During our engagement we lived in cities some distance apart. We corresponded almost daily and I visited her once a month. This is my problem: I have just found out she was unfaithful during that time. There were several men, all of whom I met and accepted as her friends, never suspecting any improper relations existed.

* * * *

During the 10 years of our marriage she has been everything I could expect of a wife and mother. We have two children, a girl 8 and a boy 6 years old. My mind is at ease as to her conduct since our marriage. I realize the children should and must have a happy home life if they are to reach manhood and womanhood with the right outlook on life. I feel their responsibility should be jointly shared and that children should not be made to suffer as a result of mistakes made long ago.

* * * *

In spite of my convictions I haven't been able to bring myself back to normal, and the very thought of those other men drives me almost insane. During our engagement I lived the kind of a life I thought she was living. Please, if you can suggest anything that will help me get a new lease on life I shall be most grateful. I wish to forget the past—but how?

WORRIED.

On Loving Realistically.

DEAR WORRIED: Objectively assayed, one's experiences are important only as they permanently affect one's character and one's social worth as a human being. If, during a decade of marriage, your wife has been an exemplary mate and mother, you have substantial proof that she did not, in the realest sense, come to you as "damaged goods." You may find it hard to forgive her sins against the spirit of your pre-nuptial contract; but bear in mind the fact that, by some miracle of grace, the person who sins is ofttimes preparing himself, though unwarely, for a state of more enduring saintliness. As Sara Teasdale wrote in a poem titled Spirit's House: My spirit's quiet house will be built of naked stones I trod on roads where I lost sight of God."

* * * *

It is futile, even absurd, to suffer almost insane jealousy at the thought of these shadowy figures in your wife's remote past. Since time immemorial, women have been expected philosophically to condone their husband's premarital sowing of wild oats, and it has long been accepted as a sociological truth that a sincerely reformed rake makes the best of husbands. He has dealt with temptation and irrevocably chosen the better part. This is unquestionably the case with your wife. Her pre-marital experiences must have taught her that the only happiness in love is that to be found in an absolutely monogamous union.

* * * *

Science has dissected jealousy to discover that it is an agonized feeling of helpless inferiority to the person or persons of whom one is jealous. We are jealous of those we believe to be more admirable, more desirable, than ourselves. But it stands to reason if any of these shadowy rivals had been able to achieve with your sweetheart a reciprocity of love transcending that which you were able to establish, the engagement would have been broken forthwith. Since the engagement stood and marriage followed, you are obliged to conclude that you won in a walk; that quite unconsciously you towered head and shoulder, in her opinion, over hypothetical and potential rivals.

* * * *

Do not torment yourself needlessly, therefore, by conjuring up images of the woman you loved—and love—in intimate moments with other men. Regard those transient long outlived associations as she (if and when she remembers them at all) must regard them—as reckless, impulsive, groping, mistaken; but pointing conclusively to the fact that there was, and could be, only one man in the world for her. It was no doubt this realization which prompted her to marry you with the financial obligation still outstanding; eager to fight your battles with you. Since there was this impulse to adventurous experimentation in her nature, it is far better that it should have been unleashed before marriage, rather than afterward. In the latter event, and only then, could it have been construed as a reflection upon your abilities as husband and lover.

* * * *

After all, much can be forgiven her on the ground that she belonged unquestionably to the post-war, the so-called "lost generation," whose youth groped blindly—some to perish socially and spiritually—in the mad chaos of a world whose ideals and standards were temporarily uprooted. No doubt in her heart she blesses you constantly for being what you are; for having saved her, through being just yourself, from a tragic waste of her splendid talents for living. All that she has been and known has gone into the making of the woman she is today, and if you find that woman altogether congenial, lovable and trustworthy, don't be so foolish as to let your marriage down by brooding over past history that you might wish were different. You are faced with the challenge of loving realistically, in the light of knowledge, understanding and acceptance; as distinct from loving romantically, in the light of story-book idealism.

Tomorrow's Problem.

Burgundy, New Color, Good for Nail Polish

Burgundy, a color which is catching on in fashion circles like wildfire, can be had in nail polish. Brushed on your toes, which should peep through the open work in your sandals, this color is particularly chic. It is slightly darker than the shade known as Miami red, which continues its wide popularity. Color accent in accessories is important. Many of the smartest ensembles take into account the color combination on both the finger nails and the toe nails.

Cool, Smart and Tubable

Dotted Swiss, with a permanent starchless finish and preshrunk, fashions this washable cotton frock for general daytime wear. The four stitched pockets, large, flat buttons and flattering little collars are distinguishing features.

Sports Clothes Now Practical; Blouses Are Full, Sleeves Short

Tailored Suits for Business and Street Have Many Interesting Details—Saddle Stitching, Numerous Pockets.

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

WOMEN who are in the habit of making their own summer clothes will be delighted with the variety of materials available and the simplicity of the new paper patterns. It also will be a great relief to know that the latest fabrics are not only color-fast but, being sanforized (pre-shrunk), will be washable after laundering.

To give home dressmakers a preview of the summer styles made of washable materials, a traveling "miniature mannequin" show is on display in a local store. Twenty-seven of these fashion dolls present the summer style story, including daytime, evening, beach and play clothes, and there is a fashion authority in attendance to advise about styles, materials and laundering.

New Stylings.

Here are some of the highlights of the interesting showing that you can apply to your own wardrobe planning:

Sports clothes are simple and practical—full skirts for long strides, action-back blouses for active sports, brief sleeves.

Tailored clothes for business and street have interesting details—saddle stitching and numerous pockets are considered tremendously important.

Washable materials for evening are as numerous as the hundred and one individual styles from which to make a choice. You can go sleek or very bouffant, according to the proficiency of your sewing and the slimness of your figure.

Little jackets accompany the majority of costumes, making them serve for both dinner and dancing. Sheers of cotton and the sturdier piques share honors equally for summer night life.

Simplicity Is Keynote.

It is well to remember, authorities advise, that when making your own clothes, simplicity is the keynote for perfection. This means that the garments will not only turn out better (not look homemade), but also will be easier to launder. This also applies to trimmings—the less complicated the better. In regard to printed fabrics, the summer 1937 prints are so well executed with spaced designs that virtually everyone can wear every available pattern well. In the striped patterns and plaids more discrimination is necessary and the figure is the guidepost in the selection of materials.

Among the most popular of the summer materials are muslins which have been given a permanent starching, piques, dotted swisses, voiles, cotton and rayon mixtures of lovely textures cotton broadcloth, uncrushable linens, sharkskin and sharkskin weaves, cotton laces, cotton shantung, chambray, gingham and calico. Colors range from white and black to dusty pastels and brilliant primary colors, with subtle muted tints of unusual attractiveness.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THIS VALE of tears has produced some pretty hard living in days gone by. When we think of how many hundreds of years passed before comfort was any point for furniture to be concerned with, we really wonder why anybody ever bothered to sit down at all.

It was in the time of William and Mary that comfort became an issue in furniture, and that was just before the start of the eighteenth century! That influence came from Holland along with William of Orange himself. The Dutch of this period were not courtiers. They set a great store by domestic virtues and comfort; and so they developed, among other things, chairs that curved according to the body.

William and Mary furniture, evolved in England under this influence, has a pleasant, livable quality about it and adapts itself to many backgrounds. As a rule it is distinguished by legs that have graceful knobby effects sometimes called the inverted cup, sometimes the bell-capped upright, but otherwise fairly straight. The bun or pear shaped foot is also characteristic and occasionally the hoof foot is seen. Flat, curving stretcher-bases in an X shape are seen on this type of furniture, usually with a turned finial at the intersection.

Chair backs are generally rather high, with a half moon shaped top line, while the seats are squarish, narrowing toward the back. The arms curve outwardly to make room for voluminous costumes of the period. Cabinets are hoisted high with a shaped apron. Oak being off the floor on their legs and joined the leading cabinet wood of this time, it was used importantly for the furniture we know as William and Mary, and since oak is a very hard wood that doesn't carve very graciously, carving wasn't common. But during this period the age of walnut began, and so many of the old and most of the copies of William and Mary furniture are executed in walnut, but they retain their plain surfaces.

Historian Says Font of Youth Always Will Remain Legendary

Mrs. Lowry Declares Explorer Learned of Spot From Indians.

PONCE DE LEON'S fountain of youth still is mythical. It always was mythical and women who have a hope in the back of their mind that it may be discovered some day might as well keep on going to the beauty parlor.

This discouraging opinion is voiced by Mrs. Sumter de Leon Lowry, of Tampa, Fla., who was decorated by former King Alfonso of Spain for her work in unearthing knowledge of the early Spanish settlers in Florida. None of Mrs. Lowry's research shows that Ponce de Leon, a gay old dog of 52 years who was somewhat worn down by his adventures, ever had anything but an Indian legend to back his quest for the mysterious source of rejuvenation.

"He thought it was on an island," said Mrs. Lowry, "but he never found it, nor has anyone found anything that accounts for the legend."

Rewarded by Alfonso.

However, Mrs. Lowry, in her investigations, did discover and assemble many interesting facts concerning the ill-fated expedition of Pamfila de Navarez in 1528. Her research in this line and her work in bringing it to the attention of the public led former King Alfonso to bestow on her the Royal Order of Isabella la Catalica. She is one of two women in the United States ever to have received this decoration.

Mrs. Lowry is visiting her niece, Miss Fannie Wilson, at Stoneleigh Court. A leader in the activities of the Society of Colonial Dames, her pet project is that of awakening Americans to the importance of Florida's early history.

More historically important than the Plymouth Rock or Jamestown, she maintains, is Tampa, where Pamfila de Navarez and his valiant band landed in 1528. This same explorer had made a first crossing to Florida in 1525.

"These expeditions," she said, "give Florida priority historically over any other State. The first crossing was 92 years before the landing of the Pilgrim fathers and 79 years before the founding of Jamestown.

Only One Survivor.

"Because the Spaniards who came to Florida did not colonize, their achievements have been lost sight of. Spain sent the first commissioned expedition to the New World. With Pamfila de Navarez in 1528 were 400 men, 80 horses (these being the first horses ever seen in America) and a delegation of priests.

"After months of incredible hardships in a hostile and trackless land, all perished save one man, who 10 years afterward reached Spain with his almost unbelievable story."

In 1928 Tampa, at the initiation of Mrs. Lowry, celebrated the 400th anniversary of the landing of this expedition. In May, 1939, Tampa will celebrate the 400th anniversary of the arrival of Hernanda de Soto. The National Society of Colonial Dames will celebrate this event in each State through which De Soto passed.

Mrs. Lowry, a native of Raleigh, N. C., has lived in Florida 40 years. She is honorary vice president of the Florida Society of Colonial Dames and founder and president for 25 years of the Tampa chapter of the organization.

Raisin Drop Cookies Keep Flavor Longer

Are there cookies in the crock at your house? Grandmas are the proverbial cooky-bakers, of course, but most of them started their cookery careers long before they arrived at the grandma stage. So, if you haven't already done it, you'd better make your cooky debut now. Choose an easy recipe like raisin-nut drop cookies for your first attempt. A raisin recipe has the additional advantage of keeping fresh longer than some other kinds.

Spiced Lobster Paste Is Summer Delicacy

Lobster paste, carefully seasoned and spiced and packaged in a clear glass container, is one of the tastiest of the "summer specialties" in many homes. Succulent and filling, it pleases guests without causing them to feel "overfed" as might heavier, more substantial meat dishes.

Those who enjoy the distinctive flavor of sea foods will probably want to try all the pastes now available in transparent glass jars. Shrimp, anchovy and crab paste may be added to the lobster paste, then, as summer appetite teasers... and guest pleasers!

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Hay Fever Inherited?

The so-called rose fever which is prevalent just now is due to two things—the sudden loading of the atmosphere with fine pollen grains from plants, and a peculiar state of the body cells of a certain percentage of the population.

The pollen grains are from plants with inconspicuous flowers, which are light and float for a long time in the wind. The disease was called "rose fever" because the rose is a conspicuous flower at that time, but the rose has a sticky pollen which would not be borne on the wind.

How the people get that way is a mystery. It was thought for a while that they might have gotten an overdose at some time in childhood which acted the opposite of an ordinary infection. In other words, it made them h persensitive rather than insensitive—that they were more likely to be poisoned in the presence of the offending substance than to throw it off. This, of course, is exactly the opposite of the immunology which occurs after an infection with typhoid fever or measles or smallpox, where one dose protects for life. We have experience with certain diseases, such as pneumonia, erysipelas and rheumatism, where one attack does seem to make a person susceptible to another. For that reason for a while this condition was called anaphylaxis, which is the opposite of prophylaxis.

However, it is now known that an initial attack is not necessary, that the body cells seem to be born with a certain sensitivity to these various substances.

This hereditary nature of the condition has been denied by some people. The study of identical twins would seem to be a good field to prove or disprove it. Several have been made on this subject. In a study of 71 twins with different forms of allergy, it was found that in similar instances both twins were sensitive to the same substance.

I have before me the study of a number of families, including families with identical twins. This is a paper read before the Association for the Study of Allergy. It shows that when a person with hay fever or similar condition was found in a family, that a study of the rest of the family showed no higher percentage of hay fever than in the general population.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Eckener Ends Inspection of Airship Debris

Zeppelin Company Head Refuses to Comment on Disaster.

By the Associated Press.

Lakehurst, N. J., May 14.—For an hour under overcast skies today the dean of dirigible masters, Dr. Hugo Eckener, carefully inspected all that remained of the majestic Hindenburg, then he and his colleagues of a German investigating committee joined the American inquiry, already under way, to press with new vigor the search for the cause of the disaster.

His face expressionless, the tall, stooped chief of the German Zeppelin Co. plodded through the wet sands of the landing field around the wreckage with his colleagues, devoting much attention to the stern where first appeared the flames of destruction a week ago last night.

It was a silent inspection Eckener and his German companions made, and if they found any clews to the cause of the disaster in which 35 persons perished, the 68-year-old expert did not disclose them when he returned to the hangar.

"As long as the inquiry is pending," he stated, "it is impossible for me to give you any statement or any ideas regarding the cause of the disaster." He then announced the six-man German investigating committee which he heads would join the Department of Commerce inquiry board in the capacity "of advisers and observers."

Helium Ban Lifting Urged.

By the Associated Press.

Representative Lanham (Democrat), of Texas, urged the House yesterday to approve relaxation of laws governing the use of noninflammable helium. This, he said, would permit development of commercial lighter-than-air transportation service by Americans. The Texan said the recent destruction of the Hindenberg had emphasized that the United States has "a practical monopoly" on helium.

Harold S. Kennedy, Bureau of Mines expert, said noninflammable helium is as cheap and nearly as efficient as hydrogen for dirigible use.

The Hindenburg was filled with hydrogen. Some Germans here said this was done to save money and to give greater lifting power. Kennedy contended helium has 92.6 per cent the lifting strength of hydrogen.

Lewis Calls Court 'Unstable, Fickle'

By the United Press.

John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, last night demanded again passage of President Roosevelt's judiciary reorganization program and attacked the Supreme Court as "unstable, variable, fickle, irresolute, vacillating."

In a radio speech he hailed validation of the Wagner labor relations act as "a wholly astounding concession," but said it had come about chiefly "because one man has changed his mind."

Calvert County Hospital Benefit Set for Tonight

The women of Calvert County will sponsor a May ball for the benefit of the Calvert County Hospital at Seaside Park, Chesapeake Beach, tonight at 8 o'clock.

A May queen will be crowned, and there will be a quadrille of 16 couples, garbed in the costumes of the 1860's. Chairman of the affair is Mrs. L. Herbert Chaney, of Owings, Md.

Roosevelt Remains Adamant On Court Change, Relief Slash

Senator O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, formerly was Farley's First Assistant Postmaster General.

Robinson said that with respect to general legislation the Senate "has kept well up on its work," declaring the calendar is "much smaller" than he had ever seen it "at this advanced stage of a session." He said all the general appropriation bills except the military and Interior Department measures had been disposed of, though there probably will be another deficiency bill toward the end of the session.

Executive Reorganization.

The Executive Department reorganization bill was not discussed, he said, and there was only general mention of new legislation to come from the White House.

Almost an hour later, Speaker Bankhead, of Alabama, and Floor Leader Rayburn, of Texas, completed their own discussion with the Chief Executive.

The Speaker said the general legislative situation was discussed "and we undertook to give him an accounting of the condition of the calendar and the status of bills reported so far."

He said he thought the President, probably next week, will send up his views of the additional regional TVA's and said the conference had included details "about bills of no special importance."

The court reorganization measure was not discussed, he said, "because that is entirely in the Senate."

The Speaker's report of the economy discussion pictured it as "very limited," though he said the President feels the question of a 10 or 15 per cent cut in appropriations is a matter for Congress to work out.

White House Authority.

Capitol Hill sources, however, represented the President as feeling he already has authority to make the cuts called for in two economy proposals. The plan of Representative Clarence Cannon, of Missouri, ranking member of the Appropriations Committee, calls for the impounding of 15 per cent of department appropriations, giving the President discretionary power as to the expenditure. The proposal of Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina, would make a 10 per cent horizontal cut.

The President was reprsented at the Capitol as feeling he has authority under the apportionment act of 1936 and the economy act of 1933 to set up reserve funds in the departments, not to be spent unless it is absolutely necessary. Such reserve funds already have been started in a modest way, it is said.

The President's reported assurance he can balance the budget in 1938 is said to include provisions for interest on the public debt, though no retirement provisions.

It was emphasized that the proposed power and flood authority bill and the farm tenancy measure, as projected, would not add seriously to the Government's financial burden. Very little money would be called for under the "more TVA's" plan, and the expenditure for farm tenancy elimination would be comparatively slight. While the pending measure on tenancy provides for $130,000,000, it was suggested the bill to be enacted might not carry more than $10,000,000.

Speaker Bankhead said he thought the President "later on" may send a message on labor legislation, though "he is not prepared to do it now."

Subjects discussed at the Cabinet meeting were not disclosed.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins was asked whether wage and hour legislation might now be expected, but replied:

"Well, that is not what we discussed."

Asked what had been discussed, she replied, "more important things."

Meanwhile, the bitter court battle continued with lines apparently unchanged.

Alternative Courses.

Two alternative courses are understood to be under consideration among proponents of the reorganization plan. One was the proposal which Senator Robinson was reported by some of his friends as planning to suggest at the White House, calling for the committee to report out a two-justice compromise. The other involved refusal to yield any ground until the opposition shows its strength through a threatened filibuster on the floor. Then a compromise could be resorted to if it became necessary.

Predictions have been made freely that the Judiciary Committee, if the six-justice provision is retained, will vote at least 10 to 8 against the bill.

Another possibility figuring in speculation on the bill's ultimate fate centers on probable House action. Belief has been expressed that if the Senate should pass the measure with a two-justice limit, the House by a majority of at least 50 votes can amend it to provide the six-justice increase. The bill would be sent to conference, and then, some of its proponents say, would be the time for compromising.

R. O. T. C. Drill At U. of M. Won By Company C

Second Platoon of Co. A Also Is Victor; Medals Are Awarded.

Irving P. Mendelsohn, 141 Uhland terrace northeast, Washington, led Company C of the University of Maryland R. O. T. C. unit to victory yesterday in the annual competitive drill at College Park.

Winner of the platoon competition was the second platoon of Company A, under the command of Parks Patterson, of Baltimore. The squad close-order drill was won by the first squad of the second platoon of Company I, H. W. Kreuzburg, of Silver Spring, Md., in command.

Members of the victorious squad were W. B. Rowe, of Washington; R. W. Farkus, of York, Pa.; R. A. Brand, of Washington; T. S. Coleman, of Washington; R. W. Carroll, of Alexandria; L. J. Mattingly, of Washington, and C. C. Ramsberg, of Middletown, Md.

Top honors in the individual manual of arms competition were won by Francis Zalesak, of College Park. He was awarded the "Class of 1899" gold medal, presented by J. J. Betton, of Washington, a member of that class.

Medals were awarded to the three best-drilled cadets in the Pershing Rifle Company, crack drill team. They were Thomas W. Reilly, of Germantown, Md., gold medal; John Reckord, of Baltimore, a nephew of Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, adjutant general of the Third Corps Area, silver medal, and W. H. McManus, jr., of Berwyn, Md., bronze medal.

Maj. Harvey L. (Heinie) Miller, of the U. S. Marine Corps, was chief judge of the competitions. Maj. Gen. Reckord was guest of honor.

The annual War Department inspection of the unit was completed yesterday by Lieut. Charles A. King.

Navy Test Basin To Be Named for Admiral Taylor

The Navy's model ship testing basin, soon to be constructed at Carderock, near Cabin John, Md., will be named in honor of Rear Admiral David W. Taylor, U. S. Navy, retired, it was announced yesterday.

Admiral Taylor, who lives at 1869 Wyoming avenue northwest, was the war-time Chief Constructor of the Navy, serving under President Roosevelt when he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy. He is considered the country's outstanding naval architect, and has an international reputation. The choice of the name of the basin, "The David W. Taylor Model Basin," was approved by President Roosevelt.

Court Change Foes Send Plea to Wallace

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace exhibited yesterday a telegram appealing to him to raise $100 to help defeat President Roosevelt's court legislation.

The telegram, he said, bore the name of "Sumner Gerard, treasurer, Gannett Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government."

Wallace chuckled and said he guessed that the committee did not know he was in the Cabinet, or that it had misunderstood his speeches favoring the President's bill.

Protection Urged On Foreign Bonds

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Commission recommended yesterday the protection by law of American owners of defaulted foreign government bonds.

The commission said, in a report to Congress, $1,748,898,000 out of $5,345,499,590 of foreign bonds owned here at the close of 1935 were in default.

In Latin America, 76 per cent of the bonds issued no longer pay the agreed interest. Lesser defaults have occurred on bonds issued by European and Far Eastern countries, and by Canada.

As in an earlier report on defaults in domestic corporate securities, the commission criticized banker participation in foreign bondholders' protective committees.

Referendum on War Is Urged by Sen. Nye

Norwich, N. Y., May 14 (AP).—United States Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, urged tonight a referendum "by the people" on the question of entering another war.

Speaking at the annual convention of the Chenango County Teachers Association, Senator Nye asked a "larger voice of the people to determine when this Nation shall participate in another foreign war."

Bob Burns Says

Copyright, 1937.

In most professions like bein' a doctor or lawyer, people go to school for years and then they expect to open up an office and start in gradually and finally build up a pretty good business, but out here in Hollywood, it's different. There's been so many cases where a person got a good part in a picture and made a success over night and they've jest kinda gotten to be an impatient lot.

The other day on the set where we are makin' Mountain Music, we were usin' a bunch of children and I happened to notice one little red-headed boy walkin' up and down with a worried look on his face and I says, "What's the matter, Sonny—you look worried," and he says, "Yes, I was jest thinkin'," he says, "I'm four years old today and what have I got to show for it?"

THE FEDERAL DIARY

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

'Economy'

The current economy move on the part of the Administration, the teeth of which already has been felt in at least three agencies, brings a sharp editorial in the Federal Employee, official organ of the National Federation of Federal Employes. Under a caption "About Federal Economy" it was stated:

"Once again it becomes necessary for the National Federation of Federal Employes to emphasize the folly of ruthless, sweeping and unintelligent 'economy' measures.

"The proposal to cut all appropriations 10 per cent is indefensible on any ground. The disastrous results of the late so-called economy legislation affords ample proof that true economy is not brought about by such measures.

"When the Federal Government's service structure was being emasculated, in response to selfish interests who demanded a reduction in Federal expenditures regardless of any and all considerations, the National Federation of Federal Employes declared pithout qualification that the course was wrong, unfair and unjust, to taxpayers as well as employes, and that it would prove costly in the long run.

"The contentions of the National Federation of Federal Employes were borne out completely. And what held true then will hold true today if there is no greater discrimination in steps taken toward greater economy in the Federal service."

You will recall that on May 1 Lowell B. Collins was appointed chief of the F. C. A. Departmental Planning Section. A word about him: He is a graduate of the University of Illinois and has been with the Farm Credit Administration since May 1, 1934, as a reviewing accountant in the Division of Finance and Research. In prior experience he had two years as instructor of accounting and banking at the University of Minnesota School of Business Administration; four and a half years with the Near East Foundation as director of finance and overseas auditor, and one year with the Comptroller of the Currency, Division of Closed Banks, in Washington.

A pleasant outing is in store for the Farm Credit Club hikers tomorrow. They will go to the Bull Run Mountains in Virginia, where the main elevation of the range is 1,000 feet. The length of the hike will be approximately seven miles. The members have been asked to bring their lunches, and if the day is warm not to burden themselves with heavy equipment. The trip leaders are Philip McCrea and Miss Dora L. Marquette.

On June 6 the club hikers will go to Fishing Creek in the Catoctin Mountains, north of Frederick, Md. The distance from Washington is approximately 55 miles. The trip leaders will be Joseph C. Kitt and Mary L. Cox. In the summer months the club will visit Wakefield, George Washington's birthplace, and Stratford, Robert E. Lee's boyhood home.

General Accounting Office Lodge 8, A. F. G. E., will meet Monday evening at 8:15 o'clock in the Hamilton Hotel to discuss the results of the conference relating to the announced laying off of G. A. O. employes. In connection with the lay-offs, Lodge 8 has made three recommendations:

"Where lay-offs are necessitated those affected shall be given at least two weeks' notice, plus their accrued annual leave.

"That lay-offs shall be made on the basis proposed by the office—of efficiency ratings, plus seniority.

"That furloughs be given, rather than outright dismissals, with the understanding that in the event of any rehiring those laid off will be recalled in order of seniority before new personnel is engaged."

In a prepared statement the lodge officials expressed hope that these and several other related matters may be cleared up by proper discussion. The policy of the office is well known as being fair and equitable, and the consideration shown in arranging this conference indicates that this will be done."

D. C. Citizens Jam Hearing On Abattoir

Many Groups Protest 'Nuisance' as Senate Committee Meets.

It was "citizens' day" at the Senate hearing on the "nuisance industry" bill as testimony was taken exclusively from residents opposing erection and operation of the Gobel abattoir at Benning road and Minnesota avenue northeast.

Men and women, white and colored, formed a steady procession to tell the McCarran sub-committee a slaughterhouse and rendering plant would produce obnoxious odors, injure property values in the vicinity, affect enjoyment of the surrounding parks and parkways, pollute the Anacostia River, and create other nuisances.

Heads of citizens' associations, a clubwoman, a Northeast property owner, a representative of an American Legion post—all were united in urging passage of the King bill to prevent establishment of new "nuisance industries" here and regulate those now in existence.

Evan H. Tucker, veteran civic leader and president of the Northeast Washington Citizens Association, said he rejoiced when the old Gobel plant at the same site was damaged by fire in 1934 and recommended passage of the antinuisance measure to forestall its revival.

Compensation Suggested.

Appearing only as an individual, since his association has not yet acted in the controversy, Tucker indorsed the amendments which have been proposed by the District Commissioners which would give the health officer and Zoning Commission wider discretionary powers.

The Adolf Gobel Co. should be compensated in return for giving up the project and its land acquired by the Federal Government by condemnation, suggested Charles A. Barker, of the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations, who warned against the distasteful odors which operation of the abattoir would involve.

W. W. Hall, president of the Federation of Civic Associations, said he would not only stop Gobel but also do away with the nearby Pepco plant, the Georgetown gas plant and all other heavy, or "nuisance," operations in the Capital.

The adverse effects which the proposed plant would have upon schools in the vicinity of the Anacostia River and the District's relations with suburban Maryland and Virginia were recited by Miss Aileen Eppley, representing the District Federation of Women's Clubs.

Robert J. Heckman, speaking as a Northeast property owner, ridiculed the opposition's argument that establishment of a large slaughterhouse here would lower meat prices and harked back to the "terrible odor" which came from the abattoir prior to the time it suspended business in February, 1933.

Another critic was George H. Rycraw, colored, chairman of the civic relations committee, James Reese Europe Post, No. 5, American Legion. Along with the majority of other witnesses, he agreed that the Gobel company was entitled to reasonable compensation if it is prevented from continuing its construction program and commencing operations.

Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell, president of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association, expressed her organization's sympathy for residents in the zone adjacent to the disputed site. Attempts by D. Edward Clarke and William J. Neale, counsel for the packer and the Union Stockyards Co., respectively, to break down her objections were fruitless.

Reply Brings Laugh.

Senator Tydings, whose aggressive examination of witnesses enlivened the hearings Wednesday and Thursday, was absent yesterday, but there was no paucity of humorous incidents. The loudest and most prolonged laughter came when Mrs. Worrell was under questioning of Clarke. He asked her when she last visited a stockyard.

"When I went to Chicago in 1935," she accommodated.

"You went to visit the cattle show, I suppose," the lawyer suggested.

"No, indeed," replied Mrs. Worrell. "I was visiting friends."

House Approval On 'Red Rider' Deal Forecast

Compromise for Repeal Also Is Expected to Pass Senate.

House approval of the compromise proposal for ridding Washington schools of the "red rider" was forecast yesterday by Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, after conferences with opponents of repeal.

Kennedy said that the proviso suggested by the House members has been accepted by Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and Representative Taber (Republican), of New York.

The compromise calls for repeal of the rider but with the explanatory language:

"Provided that nothing herein shall be construed as advocating communism."

All Senate conferees have agreed to the proviso, it is understood, although they at first stood flatly for outright repeal of the "red rider" or nothing.

The House managers, bound to press for the "pink rider" adopted by the House, were able to obtain approval of the compromise only after several conferences.

For a while it appeared that the Senate and House would both remain adamant, and the repeal legislation would die in conference.

Kennedy expects to call up the conference report the first of next week. His motion probably will be to substitute the language of the compromise for the McCormack amendment.

While the Senate has twice voted for outright repeal, the Senate conferees believe it will accept the compromise rather than see the "red rider" remain a law for another year.

Dental Alumni of G. U. Holding Dinner Tonight

Two hundred members of the Georgetown Dental Association will hold their second dinner tonight at the Washington Hotel, with prominent professional men as guests. Dr. C. Willard Camalier, president-elect of the American Dental Association; Dr. G. Albert Smith, president of the District of Columbia Dental Association, and the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., Georgetown University president, will attend.

Announcement was made yesterday that Dr. John Robert McIntyre, a member of the Georgetown faculty, will be toastmaster. The principal speakers will be William E. Leahy, law graduate of the university, and Dr. J. P. Burke, president of the Dental Alumni Association.

'Off With the Old,' Says D. C., Swaps Fedoras for Yipiyapis

Straw Hat Season Opens on Government Pay Day, Half-Holiday; Fancy Bands Expected to Be All the Rage; Prices—$1.95 to $100.

This is Straw Hat Day and, according to the consensus of male millinery experts canvassed yesterday, quite the time to donate your fedora to the check girl and step under an optimo or the like if you would be comme il faut and all that.

Yes, indeed, the season is officially arrived so what'll it be, something in a conservative Sennit, a Tuscan sailor or maybe a nice, cool yipiyapi?

A limited survey disclosed the stores of Washington have something to please practically everyone's taste and purse. There are audible bands and black bands, high crowns and low crowns, wide brims and narrow brims. The assessments range from $1.95 to $75, and, yes, $100.

The very latest thing, gir—fellows, is a skimmer woven from cocoa mat produced in the Bahamas. At least, that's the ukase of one department store hat buyer. It is a dark brown, with fancy band made of cloth hand-printed in India. This is a $6 number.

Yipiyapi Ventilated.

Of course, if you're more partial to the Japanese, there is always the yipiyapi, a very lightweight creation which boasts a ventilating effect. That is, according to the enthusiastic buyer, the air goes right through the coarse fibers.

Too, the clerk may show you an off-white model of peculiar weave and color from Tuscany, a nifty $100 Panama job from Ecuador, a dark Leghorn, a sporty Bangkok or a pinch-front affair with snap brim which looks exactly like your fall-winter chapeau save that it's made of straw instead of felt.

Some difference of opinion was noted as to whether the well-dressed man will wear a plain or fancy band this season.

"Fancy bands will be the rage this year," volunteered one salesman, "especially on sailors." (Note: He meant on sailor straws, or Sennits.)

But there was some dissent further down F street.

"Fancy bands are on the wane," advised another retailer.

"Plain black and Navy blue will be most popular," predicted another.

Today Is Pay Day.

But all were agreed that this will be the best straw hat season in years. The stores carrying $75 and $100 kellys in stock didn't boast they would have a big turnover in those styles but expressed confidence they'd sell several before the World Series.

"In this price range, you know, we handle only the hat body, as it were, trimming it to suit the buyer's taste," the store spokesman explained. "It becomes, so to speak, a custom-built affair."

Since today is Government pay day and a half-holiday, the stores are hoping only for fair weather to launch Straw Hat Day successfully.

Order to Acquit Indicated for One In Jenkins Death

Justice Jesse Adkins, sitting in District Court, yesterday indicated he would order a directed verdict of acquittal for Edna Weaver, who, with Mrs. Marie Sanford, has been on trial for manslaughter in connection with the death of William Grover Jenkins in a rooming house in the 500 block of Tenth street southeast early last September.

At the same time the justice took under advisement whether a like verdict should be given Mrs. Sanford, in whose house Jenkins was found dead in a pool of blood.

Apparently Jenkins, 54, a retired fireman, had died from loss of blood. There were two large wounds in his leg, which, police said at the time, were inflicted by some sharp instrument.

Hazen Urges, House Shuns 1% Sales Tax

Dirksen Asks Income Levy, to Distribute Burden Equitably.

The local tax situation became more tangled yesterday when a proposal for a sales tax met favor in the District Building and disapproval on Capitol Hill.

In the House, a movement against the sales tax and in favor of an income tax was begun by Republican members of the House District Committee. In the District Building, Commissioner Melvin Hazen declared that a levy on sales would probably be substituted for an income tax, now thought to be unconstitutional.

Hazen also said the adoption of a sales tax would not necessitate killing the proposed business privilege tax. If both were adopted, he explained, persons subject to the sales levy probably would be exempted from the other.

Dirksen Asks Income Tax.

The counter movement in the House was led by Representative Everett M. Dirksen, of Illinois. Disturbed by the statements of Chairman Mary T. Norton and Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal favoring a sales tax of perhaps 1 per cent, Dirksen insisted he would push his fight for an income levy.

"If the committee insists upon a sales tax," he said, "we will move to substitute an income tax on the House floor."

Dirksen said he had conferred with Representative Cole, of New York, the other Republican member of the sub-committee, and with Representative Mapes (Republican), of Michigan, author of the original District income tax bill. Both have agreed to help promote the levy on incomes as against retail sales.

The House members also plan to enlist Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, who frequently had advocated a District income tax.

Dicksen said the bill contemplated would include Federal employes, despite the opinion of Seal such legislation could not be sustained in court.

"I believe it would be held constitutional," said Dirksen, who is a member of the District bar.

"An income tax law has three advantages over most types of taxation," he asserted.

"First, it is equitable. Second, it imposes a tax on revenue already earned. And third, it is capable of expansion."

Dirksen also said a levy on incomes conforms with modern political thought that taxes should be imposed in proportion to ability to pay.

To Start on Program.

"A sales tax, on the other hand, places the burden on those least able to pay," he said. "A man earning $100,000 a year may not require any more food than a man whose wages are $20 a week, so that both would pay the same tax."

Chairman Kennedy said the sub-committee will be called together probably next Tuesday to start drafting a definite tax program.

"I don't think we need to hold any more hearings," he said.

The sub-committee tentatively has approved the District Commissioners' proposals to increase the tax on insurance and set up a motor vehicle weight levy and an inheritance tax. The members also favor the principle of a business privilege tax, but have not determined on the percentage yet.

Lonely Girls' Club Proposed For Capital

Men Outnumbered 8 to 1, Psychologist Claims; Urges Solution.

And this, according to Dr. Albert G. de Quevedo, psychologist and lecturer, is the trouble with Washington. Washington girls, particularly young women from the rest of the country attracted here by Government positions, far outnumber men of their own age. The result, says Dr. Quevedo, "numbers of young girls find themselves so terribly lonely."

The solution, continued the young psychologist, a lineal descendant of one of the oldest Spanish-California families, is "for some organization or club to look into this matter, and find a way to give these young ladies a meeting place. It would keep them from going to cheap dance halls; it would work both for their own entertainment and the good of boys who are from outside the city originally."

Such a club, or meeting place, he adds, should have an air of easy informality, of attractive hospitality. "It should not be a place of last resort for lonesome hearts, but built up as the place to go," says Dr. Quevedo. Organizing such a meeting place, he says, "would be one of the greatest services the city could do its many guests."

Dr. Quevedo is in Washington for a series of lectures on "Psychology—Fact and Fable," to be given from May 16 to 20 at the Immaculate Conception Parish Auditorium, Hurney Hall. Two weeks ago he gave a similar series here. At that time he was impressed by the number of questions which demonstrated how lonely many Washington girls are.

Intelligent use of psychology, says Dr. Quevedo, can mean the curbing of anti-Christian propaganda, of communism, fascism and socialism. "If a fellow has a good job, eats three good meals a day, if he's happy and thinks he is making a success," he continues, "he won't want to overthrow the Government."

A.F.G.E. Refuses Delegate Favoring Liberties Union

The District Department of the American Federation of Government Employes last night declined a seat to a delegate because he had expressed himself approvingly of the American Civil Liberties Union.

The delegate, offered the District body by Labor Department Lodge No. 71, was Ernest R. Perkins. The department's committee on credentials ruled against his seating on the grounds that he had expressed himself favorably toward the Civil Liberties Union. Brought to a vote with very little discussion of the issue, Perkins' application for admission was defeated by 50 to 42.

The department last night by resolution went on record as favoring the establishment of daylight savings time.

Guards to Organize.

Departmental guards and special policemen in the Government buildings will meet at the Woodmen of the World Hall, 935 G place northwest, tonight at 8 o'clock to organize a benefit association, paralleling the societies within the policemen's and firemen's organizations. The new organization will be devoted to improving salaries and working conditions for departmental guards.

More Jurors Make Pleas For Jordon

Two Say They Did Not Understand Judge's Instructions.

Fuel was added yesterday to the controversy over Thomas Jordon, now awaiting death in the District electric chair, when two of the jurors in the case expressed hope that he would be given a new trial.

That makes three who feel that the condemned man should be given the benefit of whatever new evidence—or recently unearthed old evidence—is in possession of the Department of Justice.

Bradshaw B. Pearson, of 3561 Eleventh street northwest, has signed a statement, it was learned, in which he agrees with Juror Israel T. Good that the jury did not thoroughly understand Justice F. Dickinson Letts' instructions.

Pearson's Stand.

Pearson said that he was under the impression that the jury could find only one of two verdicts—not guilty, or guilty of first-degree murder. He said he favored a second-degree verdict.

The issue was whether Jordon was guilty of first-degree murder, even though the shot which killed Mrs. Lizzie Jaynes, cashier of the Garden T-Shoppe, was fired accidentally. Justice Letts, according to the record, instructed the jury that if, in their opinion, the gun was fired accidentally Jordon should be convicted of no more than second-degree murder, the maximum penalty for which is life imprisonment.

Instructions Blocked.

In his statement Pearson said: "Practically all the jurors insisted that under the judge's charge Jordon was guilty of first-degree murder because the woman was killed or shot during the commission of the robbery, and that it did not make any difference whether the shooting was on purpose or unintentionally."

He said Juror Good demanded several times that the jury go before Justice Letts and hear the instructions again, but that he was blocked.

"I believe any mistake would have been avoided if we had returned to the court for further instructions," Pearson said. "I do not now nor did I ever believe that there was evidence or proof that Jordon purposely or intentionally shot or killed the woman, and I hereby earnestly and strongly urge that Jordon's sentence be commuted from death to life imprisonment and believe that honest justice will be done by such action."

Pearson gave his statement to John M. Holzworth, erstwhile attorney for Jordon. Holzworth sent it to President Roosevelt and attached a copy of it to his petition to the Supreme Court for a writ of habeas corpus for Jordon.

18 WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, MAY 15, 1937 X ****

This Morning

This Preakness Is One Colorful Event.

By Shirley Povich.

Baltimore folk, who are making a great whoop-de-doo over their Preakness this year with their Preakness ball, their Preakness flower, etc., have just recently wised up to the fact that they have a hoss race that is of finer lineage than even the Kentucky Derby.

POVICH.

Kentucky's Derby wasn't even a gleam in Col. Matt Winn's eye when two Preaknesses had already been run at Baltimore—in 1872 and '73. Yet the Preakness for want of proper appreciation and ballyhoo has been permitted to play a distinct second fiddle to the Bluegrass race.

In recent years it has been a better test for horses than the Derby despite its distance of a mile-and-three-sixteenths, a sixteenth shorter than the Kentucky race; a better test because of its date a week later when the 3-year-olds, the pick of which are kept out of winter racing, have had a longer training campaign.

* * * *

Not until a Derby winner follows with a victory in the Preakness can it earn that final stamp of greatness, and there have been plenty of Derby winners who came to grief at Old Hilltop. Whiskery couldn't win the Preakness, or Twenty Grand or Cavalcade—yet these were Derby winners.

* * * *

Man o' War's owners didn't care enough about the Derby to send Old Red to Kentucky, but they were on the ground with the hoss that May day in 1920 when he ran the field bow-legged to win the race at the shortest odds ever returned by a Preakness winner.

* * * *

He's got three of his boys in there running today—War Admiral, Matey and Over the Top—and it's a tribute to the old fellow that one of his get tonight is being quoted at odds-on and may win at a price that will be shorter even than Man O' War's return of $3.60 for a $2 ticket.

* * * *

War Admiral's the lad and the manner in which he romped away with the Derby—much like Man O' War used to take down the purses himself—by getting out in front very promptly and staying there until the winning jockey pulled him up, stamps him as a rather genuine chip off the old block.

* * * *

But come mud this afternoon War Admiral may have a time of it with this Pompoon which led the chase after the Man O' War colt at Louisville, last Saturday. Not meaning, however, any reflection on War Admiral's mud-running ability. Old Red himself was never annoyed by goo on a track, and War Admiral's 2-year-old record indicates that Old Red has transmitted his mud-running capabilities to his boy. But just the same, there's Pompoon.

* * * *

With that peculiar heritage that Pompey has endowed upon his own sons, Pompoon can be a mighty factor today. Pompey horses are mud runners to a degree greater even than Man O' War's get. Pompey revelled in the mud, and there was Pomponius and Pompoleon and Pomposity and Pompeius—none of them stake horses but high class platers—who were three-star mudders.

* * * *

Verily, Pompoon can look War Admiral in the eye at the barrier this afternoon and say, with a straight face: "My fadder was a mudder, better'n you'r'n."

* * * *

There's a filly in these today, too, Jewell Dorsett, a 20-to-1 shot, and Miss Dorsett has ample precedent for taking it all. Two of her sex won Preakness purses — Rhyne Maiden in '15 and Nellie Morse in '24—and Nellie Morse's $45.60 return in the $2 mutuel still stands as the record Preakness price of all time.

* * * *

Sentiment, of course, will be with War Admiral today. He'll be out there trying to add a Preakness to his Derby triumph and only five horses in the 60-odd year history of the two classics have ever scored that notable double. Sir Barton did it in '19, and 11 year's later—in '30—Gallant Fox joined the select company. Burgoo King got home in both races in '32, Omaha in '35 and Bold Venture in '36.

* * * *

Man o' War never had a chance to enter the select circle by reason of his omission from the Derby, but his boy will be out there trying to give the old man a vicarious thrill this afternoon—the actual and sentimental favorite to win the race.

Ahearn Gets Johnny Pena To Meet Lou

By Bill McCormick.

The District Boxing Commission yesterday denied the appeal of Promoter Joe Turner to have the ban lifted on a bout between Lou Gevinson and Ray Ingram on the Police Benefit card, scheduled for Griffith Stadium June 2.

Commissioners Kenneth Parkinson and Claude W. Owen reiterated the stand of the governing board of local boxing that Gevinson, who has had only four professional fights, lacked the experience to cope with the eighth ranking featherweight contender.

The commission advised Turner, and his matchmaker, Goldie Ahearn, that in their opinion it would prove very beneficial to the gate if both Gevinson and Ingram were shown on the Police card, but against different opponents.

Ahearn immediately signed Johnny Pena, who defeated Lou in his fourth professional bout, as an opponent for Gevinson. The matchmaker also is contemplating the use of Ingram on the card, if a suitable opponent can be booked.

The commission also sanctioned the second of four 10-round bouts for the Police show. They placed an official stamp of approval on an encounter between Tom Chester, a colored middleweight from New York, and Ossie Stewart, of Pittsburgh. A heavyweight bout between Bob Tow, of Alexandria, and Sandy McDonald, of Texas, had previously been okayed. Two more 10-rounders and three 5-round bouts will comprise the complete program.

The commission also listened to a reuest from Earl McDonald, a colored promoter who has John Henry Lewis under contract to box here, that the colored light-heavyweight champion be allowed to box one of a list of white fighters named.

The list included Max Marek, who once defeated Joe Louis; George Nichols, former N. B. A. light-heavyweight champion; Al Ettore, of Philadelphia; Hans Birkie, Maurice Strickland, Pal Silvers, Nick Masters, Eddie Hogan, Abe Feldman, Izzy Singer and Dan Hassett.

The commission refused to sanction any of those named as an opponent for Lewis, pointing out that most of them were not top-flight heavyweights and calling attention to the fact that in Willie Reddish, of Philadelphia, and Eddie Blunt, of New York, McDonald had at his disposal two much better heavyweights who were of the same race as Lewis.

Bortz, Ace Wilson Pitcher, Ineligible

A big boost toward the inter-high baseball championship was given Eastern High yesterday with announcement by Wilson High that its very able pitcher, Kilmer Bortz, is ineligible for Monday's decisive series tilt between the two schools. The game was rained out yesterday.

The right-hander, who has fanned 71 batters in his last five games, is definitely on the low-grade list, Principal Norman J. Nelson stated. It had been hoped that he would be able to make up his deficiency, but the principal said that such a thing is impossible.

Principal Nelson said that Ray Deuhring, second baseman; Raffe Mesroblan, shortstop, and Bill Garland, pitcher, also are doubtful starters Monday. One or all of them may be declared ineligible, he said, depending on how many subjects they are carrying.

Gonzaga Golfers Win.

The Gonzaga golf team defeated Devitt, 4 to 2, yesterday. Sharkey, Gonzaga, downed Guttenplan, 1-up; Fitzgerald, Gonzaga, defeated Oakes, 6 and 5, and best ball went to Gonzaga, 3 and 2.

In the other match Bodnar, Gonzaga, whipped Russ, 2 and 1; Botton, Devitt, downed Quinn, 3 and 2, and the best ball went to Devitt, 1-up.

War Admiral Favored In Preakness Event

Cynic scored a handy victory over a fair field at Havre de Grace this spring and, despite his mediocre showing in the Derby, will draw many backers should the going be rough.

Partly cloudy and clear is the weather forecast for tomorrow, but the present condition of the track would indicate that it will take all the sun in the Florida and California chamber of commerce circulars to dry it out by post time for the Preakness. At best the track condition for the big race is expected to be slow.

Pompoon will be at home on an off track. His daddy, Pompey, was a "three star" mudder and if he follows the schedule made by Trainer C. F. Clark and tries to outrun War Admiral, the dull going will be in his favor.

Seldom has one sire been so heavily represented in a major race. Man o' War has three sons, War Admiral, Matey and Over the Top, ready to face the barrier in the event he won impressively in 1920. His get are uncertain off-track performers. He has some mud stars to his credit and others who, as the horsemen say, "can't stand up in it."

Flying Scot, sired by The Porter, and Jewell Dorsett, a daughter of Cohort, both have the blood of good off-track racers in their veins. Mosawtre, badly beaten the only time he appeared on other than a fast track, probably will be the long shot if the mud remains.

Admiral Gets No. 1.

By coincidence, War Admiral drew the same post position he had in the Derby—No. 1. This stall is not only a lucky one for the Glen Riddle Farm ace but it suits his sort of racing. A fast breaker and a front runner, War Admiral saves ground on his rivals at the start of the race. However, the first position could work in reverse for him if he is away poorly, the others probably will come over on the rail and keep him from getting to the front.

The team of War Admiral and Jockey Charlie Kurtsinger is the only holdover combination from the Derby. Merry Maker will have Georgie Woolf in his saddle, the boy who rode Azucar to victory in the first Santa Anita Handicap. Harry Richards, who piloted Pompoon in the Derby, will ride Matey because of his contract with Walter M. Jeffords.

Over the Top, in the colors of Mrs. W. H. Furst, will have Jackie Westrope, under contract to the stable. Pompoon will be under the control of Wayne Wright, who plies his whip with his left hand. Eddie Arcaro will be making his first appearance here since he was disqualified on Privileged in the running of the Pimlico Futurity last fall. He will ride Flying Scot.

Jewell Dorsett will have her regular rider, Danny Dubois, a newcomer hereabouts, and Mosawtre's jockey will be Hubert Le Blanc, last year's apprentice sensation, who broke his arm at Laurel.

Post Time At 2.

With the exception of Jewell Dorsett and Flying Scot, the Preakness candidates were out on the muddy track this morning, getting a feel of what might be the conditions on the morrow. None was asked for any serious speed, however. War Admiral and Over the Top stepped along together under restraint in 0:49 3-5 for a half mile. Matey went the same route in 0:51 2-5. Pompoon was clocked in 0.36 for three-eighths, while Merry and Mosawtre went like routes in 0:37 3-5 and 0:39 3-5, respectively.

Post time for the first race tomorrow will be 2 o'clock, and, for the first time since the daily double was introduced in the State, it will be conducted on a steeplechase event, listed as the first race. The third race will conclude the "twin wager."

The gates will be opened at 9 o'clock, and an hour later 14 windows, at which Preakness bets will be taken, will be ready for business.

Track officials have asked that children not be brought to the racing tomorrow. While there is no charge for children under 12 on other days, full admission will be charged tomorrow.

Seven Terps Qualify In Conference Meet

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Durham, N. C., May 14.—Bill Guckeyson led a small squad of Maryland athletes through the qualifying round of the fourteenth annual Southern Conference track and field championship meet, which opened here this afternoon, qualifying in three events.

Favorites ran true to form with Duke and North Carolina, outstanding contenders for the team laurels, well ahead of the field.

Guckeyson qualified in the javelin, discus and shot put, although on a basis of today's performance he appears to have only an outside chance at best in tomorrow's finals. Frank Cronin won his quarter-mile heat in 51.2 seconds, fastest time of the day, and is expected to win this event in the finals.

The Terps also qualified Beers in the broad jump, which, counting those who did not compete today, gives the Old Liners seven finalists.

120-yard high hurdles (first heat)—First, Rodgers (W. & L.); second, Carter (Clemson); third, Taylor (South Carolina). Time, 0:14.9. Second heat—First, Steckel (Duke); second, Corpening (North Carolina); third, Wicker (Davidson). Time, 0:13.2.

100-yard dash (first heat)—First, Pasco (V. M. I.); second, Shehan (Duke). Time, 0:10. Second heat—First, Woodward (Duke); second, Herring (V. M. I.). Time, 0:10. Third heat—First, Finlay (North Carolina); second, Little (South Carolina). Time, 0:10.

Javelin (ten qualifiers)—First, Karakass (Duke), 193 feet 9¾ inches; second, Richards (North Carolina), 188 feet 3¾ inches; third, Guckeyson (Maryland), 186 feet 5½ inches; fourth, Sullivan (Duke), 179 feet ½ inch; fifth, Zimmerman (V. M. I.), 169 feet ½ inch; seventh, Males (Maryland), 165 feet; eighth, Johnson (Davidson), 152 feet 6 inches; ninth, McConnell (Clemson), 149 feet 3 inches; tenth, Johnston (Davidson), 148 feet 6 inches.

Snead Cracks Mark In Metro Tourney

Bloomfield, N. J., May 14 (AP).—Sam Snead, the winter sensation who grows hotter in summer, smashed the Forest Hill Field Club's competitive course record today by blasting out a 65, five under par, in the second round of the Metropolitan Open golf championship. Combined with his opening day's 68, it gave him a total of 133 and made him the likely 36-hole leader.

Tunney Gets Ace—Caddy Champagne

Pinehurst, N. C., May 14 (AP).—Gene Tunney made his first golfing ace here today, and his feat so thrilled the former heavyweight boxing champion that he celebrated by buying a case of champagne for his threesome's Negro caddies.

On the 179-yard sixth hole he drove with a No. 7 iron, and saw his ball strike the green five feet from the pin, and then roll into the cup.

Pilots Name Newsom and Grove Today

By Shirley Povich.

Griffith Stadium will be the scene of a bit of internecine strife during the next three afternoons when Joe Cronin sends his Red Sox against his daddy-in-law's bedraggled Nats.

Cronin and Mr. Clark C. Griffith are not pulling any punches, at least this afternoon. Because Manager Cronin will shoot Lefty Grove at the Nats in the Red Sox's 1937 debut in Washington. And Manager Bucky Harris will counter with Buck Newsom.

The Grove-Newsom pitching feud has raged ever since Blustering Buck joined the Washington club two years ago. And the edge has been very much in favor of Newsom, who has had an uncanny knack of outpitching the Boston fireballer.

Sox Lately In Lead.

A week ago, the Red Sox were creating quite a stir in the pennant race, sharing the lead with the Cleveland Indians. But like every other Eastern team except the Athletics, Cronin's club slumped woefully in the West and is currently occupying fifth place with eight victories and seven defeats.

On display for the first time at Griffith Stadium will be Bobby Doerr, the Red Sox's rookie second baseman, whose exhibition around the bag has elevated the Red Sox into serious consideration as a pennant factor. And Washington fans, too, will see in Manager Cronin himself a shortstop who has been making a phenomenal comeback.

Cronin, batting approximately .450, has also recovered his former deftness in the field and beginning at last to justify the quarter-million price tag he bore when sold to Tom Yawkey in 1934.

Travis Still Absent.

The Washington team that launches a 13-game home stand today has been one of the league's prize disappointments and returned to the Capital yesterday still occupying last place after 6 defeats in 11 games on the road.

Handicapped by the absence of Cecil Travis, who was nursing a wrenched knee here while the club was on the road, the Nats do not anticipate Travis' return to action until next week. But the Nats suffered only on the attack during Travis' convalescence, for Ossie Bluege gave the club incomparable protection in the field.

Outfielder Ben Chapman's arm injury, which has kept him out of the Nats' line-up for three days, was diagnosed as a pinched nerve after Chapman submitted to an X-ray examination at Georgetown University Hospital yesterday.

Peculiarly affecting only his batting and not his throwing, Chapman's sore arm will keep him out of the line-up for a few more days. Jess Hill, who has been performing sensationally in Chapman's post, will continue to lead off the Nats' batting order.

Arlington Hall Holds Horse Show Today

Morning Classes Are Indoors; Event Opens 9 A. M.

Eliminations in the student and junior classes of the Arlington Hall Horse Show were held indoors before a capacity crowd yesterday as a steady drizzle dampened the outdoor ring. The early morning classes today will be held indoors to give the outdoor course an opportunity to drain. Construction of the outdoor course, which is built over gravel, is such that the ground will dry out within a few hours.

Among the exhibitors today will be Mrs. Evelyn Walker Robert, Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, Mrs. D. N. Lee, Maj. Frank L. Whittaker, Fenton Fadeley, the Fort Myer Horse Show team, Mrs. Eleanor Leh, Aubrey Fishback, Esther Palmer and June Kromer.

The show will open at 9 a. m. with horsemanship classes. A luncheon recess is scheduled from 11:20 a. m. to 1:30 p. m. Reserved and grandstand seats are available for the public.

The time schedule:

9 a. m. Finals student jumping. 9:30. Junior hunters. 10. Junior horsemanship. 10:30. Junior open jumping. 11. Green hunters. 11:20. Novice jumpers.
Luncheon recess.
1:30 p. m. Touch and out. 2. Lightweight hunters. 2:30. Officers jumping. 2:50. Hunters under saddle. 3:10. Middle and heavyweight hunters. 3:45. Junior team jumping. 4. Working hunters. 4:30. Road hacks. 4:45. Open jumping. 5:30. Corinthian class. 5:50. Championship awards.

Johnston Asserts Legal Fight Will Go On; Foley Is Elated.

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 14.—The world's heavyweight fight between James J. Braddock and his Negro challenger, Joe Louis, is definitely on for Chicago.

The date will be the night of June 22, the site Comiskey Park, home of the Chicago White Sox, and the distance 15 rounds, or less.

The last apparent legal obstacle was hurdled today when Federal Judge Guy L. Fake gave his long-awaited decision in Newark, N. J., refusing the application of the Madison Square Garden Corporation to stop Braddock from defending his crown against the Brown Bomber.

The machinery back of the fight was set in full motion as quickly as the decision was received.

Joe Foley, nominal promoter of the match, announced he would begin accepting mail orders for tickets immediately. Since the bout was first signed here, February 19, an amazing flood of ticket applications has been received by Foley, but he was obliged to reject all, pending the court settlement.

Foley was elated with Judge Fake's decision.

"We are all set to go," he said. "The tickets probably will be printed next week; the fighters are in training, and everything looks rosy. I have turned down more than $500,000 worth of applications, pending this decision."

Braddock, the titleholder, training at Grand Beach, Mich., smiled wholeheartedly for the first time in weeks, when he heard the news favorable to him.

"I knew we'd win," he said. "Now I can go ahead, with no worries on my mind, and train faithfully. I am in good shape already as the result of about four weeks of hard work.

Plans will be rushed to lay out the seating capacity of Comiskey Park to seat 80,000 spectators, with gate receipts of $900,000, provided the bout is a sell out. Mike Jacobs, of New York, who controls Louis' services, will be associated with Foley in the promotion. He is expected to arrive tomorrow or Monday.

Lacrosse Features Navy Sports Card

Annapolis, Md., May 14.—With its lacrosse team meeting the University of Maryland, the Naval Academy tomorrow will play host in a big day of sports in which every team in spring athletics, except the crews and the varsity track team, will see action. The University of Richmond will be met in baseball, Cornell in tennis, Washington and Jefferson in golf, and the Seventh Regiment, New York National Guards in a rifle match.

The high spot on the Plebes card will be a track meet with Mercersburg Academy. Baseball with Augusta Military Academy, tennis with Episcopal High, and lacrosse with Severn School, will round out the day.

Yoder Defeats Burke and Allan to Win Chevy Chase Golf Tourney

Allan Loses As His Putts Fail to Drop

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

The combined forces of Jupiter Pluvius, Johnny Burke and Frank Allan were unable to stop Levi Yoder at Chevy Chase yesterday and the lanky restaurant manager won the handsome Taft Trophy, his second title in two weeks, by a 2 and 1 count over Allan in the final round of the twenty-seventh renewal of the Invitation tournament.

In the morning round Yoder disposed of the highly touted Burke, Georgetown freshman sensation, on the last hole while Allan was eliminating Harry Pitt in a see-saw battle when Pitt's final bid, a 4-foot putt that would have sent the match into extra holes, lipped the cup.

A faithful gallery that at times numbered several hundred people saw Allan's putting touch completely desert him in the final round, and Yoder took advantage of opportunities on the sixteenth and seventeenth holes to score his eighth straight victory in first flight matches since last Thursday.

Allan made his only putt of the final round to make the turn all even, sinking a 15-foot putt for his par. Yoder sliced his drive and was short on his approach. Each scored 40 on the first nine.

The eventual winner threw in the first birdie of the match on the tenth hole, planting a tee shot within 5 feet of the cup and knocking in the putt. Allan missed the first of two short putts on the eleventh after Yoder left the hole wide open after his third shot.

Yoder won the match on the sixteenth and seventeenth holes, laying an approach shot within inches of the pin after his second was short of the green and Allan was forced to buck a nasty stymie that he failed to negotiate. Allan's second shot on the seventeenth hole found the trap to the left of the green and although he blasted within 4 feet of the cup he missed his third straight putt that spelled the difference between victory and defeat and Yoder putted safely for his 4 and victory.

The Georgetown University following that had cluttered up the course since the first day of qualifying on the heels of Burke were a downhearted and bankrupt throng of collegians as Burke drove into the trap of the last hole in his match with Yoder and after just making the fairway with his second, pitched short of the green and bowed to Yoder's perfectly played par 4.

Their was never more than one hole's difference in the Pitt-Allan match, although Harry missed countless opportunities to reach the final round of a tournament he won in three previous efforts.

Page Hufty, one of the pre-tournament favorites, was forced into the second flight after a bad qualifying round, but came through in flying colors, defeating Earl McAleer in the second flight, 1 up, scoring birdie 3s on the sixteenth and seventeenth holes to overcome a 1-up lead and halve the final hole for the win.

First flight—Levi Yoder (Kenwood) defeated John Burke (Kenwood), 1 up; Frank Allan (Pittston, Pa.) defeated Harry Pitt (Manor), 1 up.

Hufty defeated McAleer, 1 up.

Third flight—J. B. Rverson (Cooperstown, N. Y.) defeated W. W. Pedersen (Mount Vernon, N. Y.), 5 and 4; D. S. Stace (Army and Navy) defeated W. J. DuBose (Chevy Chase), 4 and 2.

Rverson defeated Stace, 4 and 2.

Fourth flight—L. B. Platt (Chevy Chase) defeated H. Tetreault (Indian Spring), 4 and 3; E. A. Merkle (Columbia) defeated R. A. Kelly (Congressional), 2 up.

Merkle defeated Platt, 4 and 2.

Consolations.

First flight—Volney Burnett (Indian Spring), defeated Ralph Quinter (Chevy Chase), 4 and 3; Gene Pittman (Congressional) defeated Louis Fuchs (Indian Spring), 1 up, 19 holes.

Burnett defeated Pittman, 7 and 6.

McCarthy defeated Fleming, 5 and 4.

Eible defeated McCarron, 3 and 2.

Fourth flight—George Elliott (Chevy Chase) defeated V. V. Taylor (Army and Navy), 6 and 5; J. R. McCammon (Chevy Chase) defeated H. D. Hamp (Hillendale), 2 and 1.

Elliott defeated McKammon, 7 and 6.

Landis Awaiting Report on Riddle

The Washington Club's protest of its recent deal with Indianapolis which brought Catcher John Riddle to the Nats in exchange for Catcher Shanty Hogan and a sum of cash will be considered by Baseball Commissioner Landis after X-ray photographs of Riddle's arm are available to him.

President Clark Griffith, of the Nats, who has asked Landis to cancel the deal if Riddle came to the club as an injured player, declared last night that if Riddle's injury is only temporary he would prefer to keep the catcher.

The report of the Washington club physician will be forwarded to Landis today. Meanwhile, Riddle, who declares that his arm is vastly improved, will continue to catch for the Nats.

John Lewis Wins Over Patsy Perroni

New York, May 14 (U.P.).—Light-Heavyweight Champion John Henry Lewis, Arizona Negro, tonight won an easy ten-round decision over Patsy Perroni, Cleveland heavyweight, in a dull, uninteresting fight before 4,419 fans at Madison Square Garden.

Perroni, a squat, swarthy Italian who once lasted ten rounds with Joe Louis, either could not or would not make a fight of it. And the small, rainy-night crowd was booing the fiasco by the time the fourth round was reached.

By John R. Vosburgh

Fair weather or foul, an army of more than 400 of the best school boy cinder-pounders and weight-throwers in Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina and the District will descend on Central Stadium today for the nineteenth annual Central "C" Club track and field conclave.

The bulk of the huge record entry list is intent on removing the championship crown from the collective brows of Episcopal High's team of Alexandria. Episcopal, however, rules a slight choice to retain its title and win the meet for the third time.

A soggy track resulting from the prolonged recent rains, virtually eliminates chances of record feats on the cinders. The struggle for the team championship, however, should be one of the closest in the two decade history of the meet.

Six of the 29 schools entered hail from the District proper, but Bullis Prep, of Silver Spring, Md.; Bethesda-Chevy Chase High, Washington-Lee High, of Ballston, Va.; Hyattsville (Md.) High and George Washington High, of Alexandria, swell the Capital area entries substantially. None of them except Episcopal, Virginia State champions, appears a serious threat to make off with the team trophy.

Baltimore has five schools entered, but Maryland's chief hope for the title is Tome Institute, of Port Deposit. From North Carolina comes Durham High, while the pick of Virginia's teams—Woodberry Forest, Staunton and Massanutten Military Academy—looms ominously in Episcopal's path to retain of its title.

300 Trackmen Vie In School Event

Charlottesville, Va., May 14 (A.P.).—Three hundred entries converged on Charlottesville tonight for new assaults on State high school track and field records in tomorrow's twenty-third annual Virginia Literary and Athletic League meet.

The representatives of 43 schools included a number of athletes whose performances during the current season presaged the establishment of several new marks.

Sweet beers completely outsold by Gunther's, the dry beery beer that real beer drinkers like!

That was a close finish at Pimlico yesterday. The nags gave the girls and boys a great thrill.

But there wasn't anything close about the race for popularity among Beers. Gunther's won in a walk. At the track and in all the nearby taverns and restaurants—Gunther's, with its dry beery flavor, outsold sweeter beers by a country mile.

It's just plain fact that real beer drinkers prefer the dry beery tang of the biggest-selling beer in this part of the country.

Not only here but all over the country, you'll find beer drinkers losing their prohibition-day taste for sweet beer.

In Detroit, St. Louis, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Milwaukee, and other cities where good beers are made, you'll find that people are going back to the dry, beery kind.

In those cities, as in the Baltimore-Washington market, the real beery beer is the leading seller.

You'll never tire of the taste of Gunther's. That dry tang, that beery flavor makes you want more. It grows on you. Light in body rather than heavy, you will find it completely satisfying and refreshing; yet the kind of beer that doesn't "fill-you-up."

Below . . . After the races! Race fans had more than a hunch to pick this winner. Gunther's dry, beery tang consoles the losers and helps the winners celebrate.

Above . . . If you want to know how to cool off, take the advice of a chef. "After a hot turn in the kitchens there's nothing like a glass of Gunther's dry beery beer to put you on your mettle. And it won't fill you up like sweeter heavy-type beers."

GUNTHER'S Dry Beery BEER

Dark Hope Leads All the Way in Three-Horse Pimlico Feature Race

Big Gelding Not Out of Pull in Test

By the Associated Press.

Pimlico Race Track, Baltimore, May 14.—The Francis Scott Key Handicap, Preakness eve feature of the Maryland Jockey Club, looked like a meeting of the "Last Man's Club" when only three horses competed over the mile-and-a-furlong route. The $2,000 race was little more than a workout for J. W. Y. Martin's ancient campaigner, Dark Hope. The veteran was never out of Jockey Joe O'Malley's pull as he saved ground and crossed the line five lengths in advance of F. M. Alger, jr.'s, Azucar, onetime winner of the Santa Anita Handicap. Third and last and ten lengths behind the winner, came A. G. Vanderbilt's Dusky Prince.

The original field of five was reduced by the early scratch of Scotch Bun, half of the Vanderbilt entry, and the removal, later, of Calumet Dick, the overnight favorite, who developed a fever this morning and was excused.

The race was run over a muddy track and before a crowd of 10,000, the majority of whom were well aware of Dark Hope's ability in the going. The big gelding returned a $2.90 mutuel while running the distance in 1:54 2-5.

Maintains Lead.

Dark Hope easily shook off Dusky Prince at the far turn and maintained his long lead despite the fact that Azucar was placed to punishment for the final quarter.

The pre-Preakness program got under way with a slow performance by ten cheap sprinters. Riding High, representing L. G. Blume, was an easy winner, leading Peppery to the wire by three lengths. The latter was a like margin ahead of Max B. A dead heat for fourth money was revealed by the camera and involved Hard Chase and Titian Kiddie. Riding High paid an $8.20 mutuel and was clocked in 1:15 3-5 for the 6 furlongs.

A photo finish marked the running of the day's steeplechase event, in which Mrs. James Park's Promoter took the verdict by a good head margin from H. R. Bain's Rock Sure. Bell Man was beaten a half length for the place money. The course was soggy and heavy and three of the ten entries met with mishaps. Rockden was the first eliminated, falling at the seventh fence. Kentucky Ginger crashed at the tenth obstacle and Round Bend lost his rider at the twelfth jump. Promoter was capably handled by Jockey G. Walker and turned in time of 4:02 3-5 for the 2-mile course. He paid an $8.50 mutuel.

Mobcap Is Victor.

F. J. Buchanan's Mobcap overcame some early trouble to win the third race, a 5-furlong test that brought eight juveniles to the post. The daughter of Mad Hatter, with Apprentice Jockey E. Scott in the saddle, downed Frank Brooke by a length. The latter took a photo decision from Doris Rene for the place. Mobcap was squeezed in along the rail in the early running, but Scott finally gained clear sailing, went to the outside and brought his charge along with a drive that could not be denied. Mobcap paid an $11.10 mutuel and was clocked in 1:03 2-5.

Horses Run Dead Heat Then Stage a 2d Race

Chicago, May 14 (AP).—A dead heat was run off at the Aurora track here today for the first time on record. An Illinois Racing Commission rule was invoked to permit it.

Sun Dora, owned by A. J. Motard, of New Orleans, and Cain, owned by Robert Morgan, of Detroit, finished nose and nose in the original race. The owners then agreed on a run-off, to be staged after the fifth race, with no pari-mutuel betting. Sun Dora won by three lengths in 1:06 3-5. The original time was 1:07.

Daily double players collected on Sun Dora.

WITH BILL BENNINGS

DEAR AL,

I believe that they will chase War Admiral around this race track tomorrow. I can't pick against the Derby winner. Some doubt his ability to run in the mud. However, I saw him work between races at Havre de Grace and over a sticky, holding track. War Admiral stepped along as if he liked it. I'm taking him regardless of track conditions. I prefer Pompoon for second. He is about the best mud-bred horse in the race. His second to War Admiral at Louisville was a hard-earned position. He has courage, but I doubt if he has the speed of War Admiral. Matey, trained gradually with the Preakness as his objective, must be given a money position. Just to go a bit further, I'm going to try to pick the order of the others. I'll take Merry Maker fourth; Jewell Dorsett, fifth; Flying Scot, sixth; Over the Top, seventh, and Mosawtre, eighth. Clocker Mike says Merry Maker is a cinch if the race is run on anything but a fast track. He failed to explain what happened to the same colt in the Derby last week. BILL.

First race—Baffler, making his first start of the year, is going to get my call in the day's steeplechase event. Needs only the right handling. Prattler and Red Shank to take care of the others.

Second race—Red Nose turned in a nice race last out and seems headed for a set of brackets in this company. Wagner will do the piloting. Prairie Prince was disqualified after winning here. I expect no mistakes in this. Erada is better than generally rated.

Third race—Scotch Pepper is an off-track horse and seems to fit well in this group. Appears capable of handling the 115-pound assignment. Broadstep won a purse here, and may lead Prevention to the wire.

Fourth race—Bojangles has done about everything asked hereabouts and is deserving of the call in this field. Micro should show improvement on a slow track. Bestest for the minor award.

Sixth race—War Admiral, Pompoon, Matey.

Seventh race—Chief Yeoman and Pencader should battle it out for the chief money in this rather open event. Both are fit and ready. Vitascope for the show end.

Feller May Quit For Rest of Year

Cleveland, May 14 (AP).—It probably won't be necessary, but, if advisable, baseball's most publicized rookie, Bob Feller, will be retired for the entire season with an injury to his "million dollar" pitching arm, the Cleveland Indians' vice president and general manager declared today.

"We're not taking any chances on that arm and we're not going to allow him to pitch again until the last trace of soreness has disappeared," said C. C. Slapnicka, who also is handling the 18-year-old strikeout king's business affairs.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PROMOTER, $8.50, $4.90, $3.20; ROCK SURE, $15.50, $8.10; BELL MAN, $4.20.

PROMOTER, under restraint for a turn of the field, went to the leaders while fencing boldly and was up in the final strides on the flat. ROCK SURE ran PETOLAR and CATALANO into defeat, but was weakening gradually at the end. BELL MAN, steadied along for a mile, moved up menacingly and might have won but for a bad landing at the final fence. PETOLAR weakened after a mile. CATALANO stopped. TITIAN KIDDIE did not appear to fancy the going. ROUND BEND lost rider at the twelfth fence. KENTUCKY GINGER fell at the tenth fence. ROCKDEN fell at the seventh fence.

WEATHER, RAINING. TRACK, MUDDY.

THIRD RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The New Howard. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:29. Off at 3:35. Winner, F. J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MOBCAP, $11.10, $5.40, $3.50; FRANK BROOKE, $4.00, $2.90; DORIS RENE, $3.60.

MOBCAP, in close quarters in the opening furlong, was taken to the outside for racing room, rallied sharply when shaken up and was going away at the end. FRANK BROOKE, forwardly placed throughout, closed willingly, but was no match for the winner. DORIS RENE ran WAUGH SCOUT into submission and weakened slightly in the closing stages. RIVER DEE could not threaten. The others were outrun.

FOURTH RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Mount Royal. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:57. Off at 3:59. Winner, J. W. Y. Martin's b. f. (2), by Canter—Scarlet Belle. Trained by L. Feustel. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 1-5, 1:35.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SLOW MOTION, $15.40, $3.80, $2.50; TEDEMA, $2.40, $2.10; BRIAR PLUME, $2.30.

SLOW MOTION, rated along when outrun by TEDEMA in the opening quarter, rallied when placed to strong hand ride and drew clear of TEDEMA easily. The latter was in motion at the break, opened a long lead, but tired gradually through the stretch. BRIAR PLUME was hard ridden throughout. WAY OUT and BENEFICIARY did not appear to fancy the going.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $2,000. The Francis Scott Key Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 4:21. Off at 4:22. Winner, J. W. Y. Martin's br. g. (4), by Traumer—Dinahmeur. Trained by L. Feustel. Value to winner, $1,400; second, $350; third, $200; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48 2-5, 1:14 1-5, 1:41, 1:54 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROUGH TIME, $3.70, $2.80, $2.20; SAVAGE, $3.60, $2.40; HONEY CLOUD, $2.30.

ROUGH TIME, away well, opened a good lead in the opening furlong and easily held away over SAVAGE in the closing stages. SAVAGE worked his way up and closed willingly, but could not menace the winner. HONEY CLOUD went evenly. LERNANA could not keep up. FLEETING MOON showed early speed and stopped badly.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Belvedere. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 5:18. Off at 5:19. Two-dollar mutuels paid—QUEEN GOVANS, $7.30, $4.60, $3.00; LITTLE BANNER, $19.70, $7.80; SUN SWEEP, $4.00.

QUEEN GOVANS, within striking distance of the leaders from the beginning, took command when SUN SWEEP tired and easily held away to the end. LITTLE BANNER was hard ridden throughout and closed willingly under pressure. SUN SWEEP set a good pace for a half and tired from hustling tactics at the start. CHIRIQUI dropped back gradually after pressing the early pace of SUN SWEEP. EXAGGERATION, slow to strike best stride, ran a good race. CROWDED HOURS was knocked back at the far turn. The others were not prominent.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Southern. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates for all but Poppyman. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:46. Off at 5:48. Winner, A. C. Compton's ch. m. by Pennant—Sunday Best. Trained by H. G. Bedwell. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHURCH CALL, $8.70, $4.30, $3.10; ZEMBLA, $3.70, $2.60; CHIEF YEOMAN, $3.30.

CHURCH CALL, under steadying restraint to the far turn, rallied when called upon, circled the leaders to take command and held ZEMBLA safe under a drive. The latter, outrun for a half, gained sharply in the early stretch, but could not threaten the winner when under punishment. CHIEF YEOMAN ran DUTCH UNCLE into defeat, but weakened. XANDRA tired after going forwardly. DUTCH UNCLE had early speed. POPPYMAN bolted out at the break.

Wheat Climbs 3¼ Cents With Need of Rain

Large Canadian Exports Also a Stimulus to Advance.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 14.—Soaring 3¼ cents maximum today, the wheat market responded to reports of urgent need of moisture both in domestic crop areas Southwest and in Canada.

An added stimulus for higher prices came from estimates that 1,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat had been bought today for export. Besides, Chicago dark No. 2 hard wheat as well as new crop hard winter wheat at the Gulf of Mexico, was figured as being about in line for export.

At the close, wheat was 1 cent to 2½ cents above yesterday's finish, May 1.23¾, July 1.16⅛@1.16⅝, September 1.15¼@1.15⅜; corn 1 cent off to 3¼ up, May 1.29¼, July 1.16⅞@1.17, September 1.08¼@1.08⅜; oats ⅝@2⅛ advanced, May 49¼@49¼, and rye showing ¼@1½ bulge, May 1.10½. Provisions closed 17 to 27 cents dearer.

Consumption Cuts Stocks of Copper

New York, May 14 (AP).—Further expansion in use of copper last month again cut the supply, despite rising output from foreign mines. Figures compiled by the Copper Institute disclosed today a decrease of 21,880 tons in domestic stocks of refined metal, accounting for the bulk of the decline in world supply for April.

World refined stocks at the end of April were placed at 293,360, a decline of 25,070 from March and nearly 200,000 under the comparable figure last year. Domestic stocks were announced at 99,570 compared with 121,450 in March and 233,610 in April, 1936.

April Business Holds at Level Reached in '29

South and Middle West Show Substantial Gains in Month.

New York, May 14.—The index of national business, which during March advanced 7 per cent and for the first time attained 100 per cent since 1929, remained at that point—normal—in April, according to the monthly survey of 147 trading areas in the United States, conducted by the research division of Brooke, Smith, French & Dorrance, Inc., of New York and Detroit. One year ago, at the end of April, the index stood at 15 per cent below normal.

"Although no advance is recorded in the national average," the report states, "there was much improvement in the individual trading areas of the South and Middle West, causing the gains to outnumber the losses in the 147 markets of the country."

Of the 147 trading areas, the report shows that 84 registered gains and 42 showed losses. In 21 areas business conditions remained at the same level as in March. Of the 84 which showed better conditions, 22 gained 5 per cent or more over the previous month. There are now 58 areas where conditions are either normal or above normal.

The greatest April gains, with indexes improving 5 per cent or more over March, were registered in the following areas: Abilene, Dayton, Detroit, Dubuque, Evansville, Fargo, Grand Rapids, Greenville, S. C.; Kansas City, Knoxville, Little Rock, Minneapolis, Montgomery, Norfolk, Oshkosh, Seattle, South Bend, Tacoma, Topeka, Waco, Wichita Falls and Youngstown. Washington, D. C., was among the areas classified as normal or above.

$100,000,000 Bills Offered by Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that tenders are invited for two series of Treasury bills to the aggregate amount of $100,000,000, or thereabouts. One series will be 122-day bills and the other series will be 273-day bills. Both series will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders.

Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve banks or branches, up to 2 p. m. on Monday. Tenders will not be received at the Treasury Department.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stock Prices Recover in Less Active Trading; Commodities Higher; Bonds Narrow.

New York, May 14.—Stocks improved and commodities were steadier in less active markets. Government bonds were a shade softer, but the feeling in the financial district was more optimistic. Stock turnover was around 1,250,000 shares, with closing prices near the best. July wheat advanced 1½ cents to 116⅝ cents a bushel.

Opening prices for stocks were irregularly higher and relief over the better tone brought a gradual improvement in the late trading, after a midday period of dullness. Uncertainty at the start was largely confined to industrial stocks. Rails held above the worst of yesterday throughout and utilities hardened. Gains of a point were the rule. In the late trading nearly all groups participated in an improvement which added 1 to 3 points at the best to the leading issues.

Many of the rails made up all their previous day's losses. Santa Fe, Southern Pacific and Delaware & Hudson picked up 2 points or more each. Central moved up a point as did Northern Pacific and Southern Railway. Steel shares climbed 1 to 3 points. United States Steel touched the low point of the previous day and then rallied 2 points. National Steel rebounded 4 points.

Copper statistics showing a reduction in stocks in April helped the copper shares. Other mining issues did better. Smelters and Howe Sound were the most active. Gold shares were indifferent and were neglected in London. Oils rose a little. Standard Oil, ex dividend, was lower a large part of the time, although its earnings for 1936, released today, were excellent. Motors were firm to higher, but that did not prevent General Motors from sinking to a new low price for the year in the early dealings.

Gold Price.

Through the welter of rumors and explanations for the various shades of sentiment and market fluctuations, one idea persists in keeping its head above water. That is the rumor of a cut in the gold price by the Treasury. The rumor has been denied from official sources, from the President down, but the net effect of those denials upon the most conservative minds and those which are inclined to take the Administration at its word on almost anything, is to leave the matter in doubt. Abroad also elaborate arguments have been presented in the press and economic journals setting forth why such action is plainly out of the question as an early occurrence, but even there the proviso is made that eventually something probably will be done.

On this side also the consensus is that soon or late the Government will have to get round to that, and the tendency is to say that where there is so much smoke there must be some fire. It may all turn out to be a purposeful rumor calculated to trim inflationary psychology, but it continues to run strongly. Dollars today showed unusual strength on that account, as a reduction in the gold price would immediately lift the dollar value expressed in other currencies.

While the speculative markets were worrying about deflation the financial changes of the week have been in the opposite direction, except in the item of brokers' loans. Another huge addition was made to the monetary gold stock, $44,000,000, requiring that much increase in the public debt, which means another shove toward inflation, and excess reserves of member banks of the Federal Reserve system rose $50,000,000. The excess is within about another week of a billion dollars, which ought to insure low interest rates for some time and help toward another advance in commodity prices.

Building Up Reserves.

The Federal Reserve Banks found it unnecessary to support the Government bond market in the period up to last Wednesday, but some help may have been given yesterday and the day before. On the surface the case for Government bonds looks a bit stronger. Congress seems to have forgotten some of its good resolutions on economy, but the authorities are pouring funds into the market again to insure cheap money, at least until after the next borrowing operation in June, for rigging the bond market is now standard practice with the Treasury, and pressure in other directions is being exerted.

Emissaries of the administration are now touring the country preaching the gospel of Government bond investment only to the banks. No quarrel can be picked with those speakers in their warnings against the all too prevalent habit of bankers to add to profits by looking at low-grade bonds offering high yields, but,the inference is plain: Buy Government. Losses also can be taken in that section, as bankers well know.

Meanwhile, commercial loans in this district rose moderately this week, as an offset to the reduction in stock market loans, and the latest jolt given to stocks and commodities, with its repercussion on business sentiment, greatly lessens the chances for any early change in the gold price or any other deflationary monetary action at Washington.

Cotton.

Consumption of cotton in April gave a little support to the idea that trade is beginning to slacken a little. Consumption, even on a daily basis, was mildly lower than for March, but it was 24 per cent greater than a year ago. Consumption of 779,302 bales last March, against 718,947 in April, was at an unusually high rate, forced partly by the general inflationary outlook. Cotton exports last month increased a little over March, but for the past nine months of the new cotton year they were down from the corresponding period a year ago.

March Oil Output Sets All-Time High

The Bureau of Mines reported yesterday that the daily average production of crude petroleum in March set a new all-time record of 3,442,700 barrels, an increase of 115,100 barrels over the daily average in February, the previous record month. The month's total production was 106,724,000 barrels, another record. January, this year, produced 98,567,000, the previous record. All major Texas districts showed higher production and the daily average for the State rose to 1,404,900 barrels, about 55,000 higher than the February average.

N. J. Standard Oil 1936 Net $97,774,583

Annual Report Attacks Surtax as 'Major Uncertainty.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 14.—Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey) in its annual report for 1936 today launched an attack on the Federal surtax on undistributed profits charging it injects "another element of pure guess work" into the tax structure.

Net income for 1936 was $97,774,583, or $3.73 a common share, compared with $62,863,192 or $2.43 a share in 1935.

Taxation, generally, the report said, "continues with increasing emphasis to provide a major uncertainty in business management." The profits surtax, the report declared, put "heavy penalties" on the poor guesser in the matter of dividend determination. Simplification of the Federal revenue laws "is in the long run just as important to the Government's revenues as it is to the corporate taxpayer," the report said.

If the surtax continues to operate on its present basis, it added, "corporate earnings will bear an excessive and a larger share of the tax burden than any other kind of income." The report added:

"A real basis for recovery in world conditions cannot exist until the present barriers to international trade are removed and confidence is restored. Some nations tightened still more their exchange restrictions and put other impediments in the way of normal commerce, thus retiring deeper behind the walls of self-sufficiency which they have set as their goal."

The company's tax bill on domestic business equaled $3.85 a share on the stock, compared with $3.20 last year.

Transamerica Planning Reorganization in Stock Set-up.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, May 14.—Transamerica Corporation's directors approved plans today to alter basically the structure of the world's greatest bank holding company.

The plans include:

1. Payment of about 2,400,000 shares of Bank of America stock as a dividend to Transamerica shareholders July 31, along with the regular cash dividend.

2. Calling of outstanding Transamerica stock and issuing new stock for it in the ratio of one new share for each two now held.

3. Changing the stock from no-par to $2-par per share.

4. Simplifying the capital structure of Transamerica by elimination of "unnecessary holding companies."

5. Changing the corporation status eventually as a holding company affiliate of Federal Reserve member banks.

The program will be submitted to stockholders for approval at a special meeting July 10, in Wilmington, Del.

The dividend will amount to one-fifth of a share of Bank of America National Trust & Savings Associations for each share of the new $2-par Transamerica stock. This is the equivalent of one-tenth of a share of bank stock for each Transamerica share now outstanding. Par value of the bank stock is $50.

What the value of the dividend will be to Transamerica stockholders will depend on the price brought by Bank of America shares.

A. P. Giannini, builder of the great bank holding company and chairman of the board, said he believed "the day of bank holding companies is gone." His remarks indicated a purpose to reconstruct the financial firms of the Giannini group to align them with modern tendencies and recent and anticipated Federal legislation.

The Signature on the Painting

The name of the artist does not make a painting any better. It does give it the authority, the genuineness that adds thousands of dollars to its value—if the artist is good.

The symbol "J & M" on a pair of shoes tells you that here is the best leather that money can buy for the job—here is skilled and careful workmanship—here is shoe artistry of the highest order.

†Officially listed on application by the corporation.

Other securities are admitted to dealings as "unlisted," on application of a regular member and approval by the listing committee and the board of governors.

Rates of dividends in the foregoing table are annual disbursements based on the last quarterly or semiannual declaration. Unless otherwise noted, special or extra dividends are not included.

XD—Ex dividend. EX—First sale since ex-dividend date or dates. XR—Ex rights. (a) Also extra or extras. (b) Including extra or extras. (e) Paid last year. (f) Payable in stock. (g) Declared or paid so far this year; no regular rate. (h) Cash or stock. (k) Accumulated dividend paid or declared this year. (ur) Under rule. (ww) With warrants. (xw) Without warrants. war—Warrants.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 14.—The stock market closed with a firm tone; better support was noticed in all sections. Transatlantics finished slightly higher while the remainder on the list showed fractional changes either way after selling lower earlier in the day. Tobaccos, steels, rayons, oils and rubber shares were in supply as sentiment was unfavorably influenced by the weakness in Wall street Thursday. Home rails and bonds held steady.

Paris—Government bonds were firmer in the bourse today, rentes closing unchanged to 25 centimes higher. Suez Canal shares moved 215 francs up and Bank of France gained 130. Royal Dutch was also higher.

Liverpool—Wheat futures closed ¼d higher to ⅝d lower after selling almost ½d lower early. The market steadied on firm North American markets and small May contract deliveries. Cotton futures declined under London and continental selling, offsetting some Bombay buying and closed unchanged to 1 higher. Disturbing influences included weakness in commodities and U. S. labor difficulties.

U.S. Treasury Receipts.

The position of the Treasury May 12:

Receipts, $119,629,277.05; expenditures, $76,732,470.07; balance, $1,756,010,348.64; customs receipts for the month, $18,517,-844.70.

Receipts for the fiscal year (since July 1), $4,260,068,309.86; expenditures, $6,532,-170,003.51, including $2,460,011,841.15 of emergency expenditures; excess of expenditures, $2,272,101,693.65; gross debt, $35,-800,248,595.01, an increase of $52,103,-910.68 over the previous day; gold assets, $11,482,106,863.55, including $650,880,-711.50 of inactive gold.

Auction Sales

MONDAY, MAY 24, 1937—
ADAM A. WESCHLER & SON, Auctioneers.

TRUSTEES' SALE OF VALUABLE TWO-STORY BRICK DWELLING, SIX ROOMS AND BATH, HOT-WATER HEAT, NO. 1621 NINTH STREET, N.E., WITH METAL GARAGE.

By virtue of a deed of trust recorded, in Liber No. 6120, folio 493, et seq., one of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of party secured thereby, the undersigned trustees will offer for sale by public auction, in front of premises, on MONDAY, the TWENTY-FOURTH DAY OF MAY, 1937, at THREE-FORTY-FIVE O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described property in the District of Columbia, to-wit: Lot 35 in George S. Cooper's subdivision of part of Square 931, as per plat recorded in Liber 37, folio 18, of the Records of the Office of the Surveyor for the District of Columbia. Subject to covenants of record.

TERMS OF SALE: Property will be sold subject to a prior deed of trust for about $3,890.00 at 5% due January 4, 1940; balance cash. A deposit of $300.00 required of purchaser at sale. Examination of title, conveyancing, recording, revenue stamps and notarial fees at cost of purchaser. Terms to be complied with within thirty days from day of sale, otherwise trustees reserve the right to resell property at risk and cost of defaulting purchaser, after five days' advertisement of such resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C., or deposit may be forfeited, or without forfeiting deposit trustees may avail themselves of any legal or equitable rights against defaulting purchaser.

ROGERS, FUREY & WISE, Attorneys, Southern Building

Chancery Sale of Valuable Apartment Hotel Property Known as "The Dupont Circle" Located on Connecticut Avenue at Dupont Circle, Being a 12-Story Brick Building and Valuable Apartment Hotel Property Formerly Known as the "Arlington" Located at 1019-1025 Vermont Avenue N.W., Being a 10-Story Brick Building.

By virtue of a decree of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia in Equity Cause No. 43613, the undersigned trustees will sell at public auction, subject to ratification by the court, in the front door of the Court House of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia on MONDAY, MAY 24, 1937,

AT THREE O'CLOCK P. M.

Lot number thirteen (13) in Edson Bradley's Combination of part of Square numbered one hundred and thirty-eight (138) as per plat recorded in the Office of the Surveyor, for the District of Columbia in Liber 43 at folio 65, together with any and all buildings thereon and all other property so attached thereto as to constitute part of the realty, all in the District of Columbia. Said property is to be sold subject to the following liens and possible inchoate rights of dower, namely:

(A) An existing deed of trust dated December 31, 1930, appearing for record in Liber 6520 at folio 457 of the Land Records of the District of Columbia in the office of the Recorder of Deeds, securing a certain promissory note of Joseph J. Moebs in the sum of $1,350,000.00 with interest at the rate of 5¼% per annum. (The Trustees are advised that maturity of this deed of trust has been extended to December 31, 1938, and is of a present unpaid balance of $1,274,100.00, bearing interest at the rate of 5¼% per annum, payable monthly, and that principal payments of $4,200.00 a month, payable monthly, are required.)

(B) An existing deed of trust bearing date of January 7, 1931, appearing for record in Liber 6526 at folio 465 of the Land Records of the District of Columbia in the office of the Recorder of Deeds to secure the payment of certain notes dated April 11, 1928, made by Joseph J. Moebs in the aggregate principal amount of $400,000.00 payable on or before five (5) years after said date, with interest at the rate of 5½% per annum. (Said deed of trust contains a provision that the release thereof may be obtained upon the payment of $50,000.00, with respect to which prospective bidders are referred to the recorded instrument. The Trustees are advised that the deed of trust has matured and interest thereon at 4% per annum is overdue from October 11, 1936).

(C) Such inchoate right of dower as Bertha J. Moebs, the former wife of Joseph J. Moebs, had and may still retain in said property.

TERMS OF SALE—One-third of the purchase price to be paid in cash and the balance in two equal installments, payable in one and two years from date of sale and to be represented by the promissory notes of the purchaser, bearing interest at the rate of 6% per annum, payable semi-annually, and secured by deed of trust on the property sold, or all cash, at the option of the purchaser. The property is to be sold subject to the above encumbrance, interest thereon, said inchoate right of dower and taxes unpaid or accrued. A $5,000.00 deposit shall be required of the purchaser at the time of said sale.

TERMS APPLICABLE TO BOTH SALES—All conveyancing, notary fees, recording, revenue stamps and examination of title to be at the cost of purchaser. Terms of sale to be complied with within thirty (30) days from the approval and ratification thereof by the Court, otherwise the Trustees reserve the right to resell at the risk and cost of defaulting purchaser after five (5) days' notice by advertisement of the resale in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C.

THIS IS YOUR SISTER, STEPHEN
WELL, WELL, WELL! NEVER WOULD HAVE KNOWN IT—SEEMS TO ME YOU WERE ALREADY A YOUNG LADY WHEN I LEFT HOME— I WAS ONLY TWELVE, THEN— HMMM— YES— THAT'D MAKE YOU ABOUT FORTY, WOULDN'T IT?
OH!
SHAKE HANDS WITH YOUR UNCLE STEPHEN, GERALD SQUIRT
LITTLE WATER MIGHT TAKE SOME OF THE CONCEIT OUT OF STEVE— BUT WAIT'LL NEXT WEEK

WHATTA YA MEAN WEIDEBOTTOM'S GONE FER GOOD?
HE CERTINY IS.
YEAH BUT HE'S STILL GOT THAT CONTRACT
UH-UH! MISTER HOWE BOUGHT IT FROM HIM.
WHAT?? WHAT'S THAT?
AN' HERE IT IS. IT'S A PRESENT TO YOUSE.
WHOOPEEee

APPLE MARY Sunny's mischief will give you many laughs Sunday. By Martha Orr

LOOK WHAT SHE DID. KICKED A HOLE RIGHT THROUGH IT. IF YOU WASN'T A GIRL, AND LITTLE, I'D PUNCH YOU RIGHT IN THE NOSE.
SHE DIDN'T MEAN ANY HARM.
